DEAR GRADUATES:

Remembering

I have been given the opportunity to leave a few thoughts with you in this rather permanent form. I have tried to imagine you, years from now, taking the book down from its shelf, blowing the dust from it, and leafing through it as you prepare for a reunion or show the book to the next generation of your family.

I hope you recall LaSalle as the people who helped you with life's purpose, with skills for your work, and with an adult commitment to your faith. I trust that the passing years will have helped you to sort out the best teaching from the rest, the friends worth keeping, the insights worth remembering.

There will be much data you have forgotten, perhaps a few disappointments you would rather not remember, and even a few escapades your friends won't let you forget.

I mainly hope that these were the years when you brought your mind into form by forging all the links among your disparate acquirements — intellectual, physical, social, moral, aesthetic — until the person emerged whom you were always meant to be, ready for the further refinements of a long life. No one knows exactly how a university contributes to such formation, though we know it is not the same process for any two persons. We do know that this sacred process that goes on here, and we certainly hope it has happened in you.

Sincerely,

Brother Patrick Ellis F.S.C.

Brother Patrick Ellis, F.S.C.
President

I would like to think that you are reading this message on the very day of your graduation, but it is more likely happening in a quiet moment some weeks, months, or even years after that significant moment in your life. By now you may have had some frustrations, some successes, and time to feel a bit of loss at having left behind the sense of secure community that LaSalle University was for you. For our part, we have not forgotten you. Your name comes up as faculty chat over lunch, fellow graduates back visiting campus will ask if we have heard from you, and our alumni people will work hard to keep you connected with LaSalle. We will continue to think of you as very much a part of the LaSalle family.

But how shall you think of us? Imagine the class of 1972 returning for a visit in 1992. In those twenty years the campus doubled in size, numerous new programs were started, the reputation of the university was greatly enhanced, and many new faculty and staff faces were added. In some respects it was still the same LaSalle, but in other ways it was quite different. We would like you to remember us as we were — caring people, committed to your education and your personal development. That part of LaSalle will never change. But other things will. As you mature, so will we. Our maturing will be seen in the ever increasing quality of our programs, faculty, and service to students. When your children are ready for college, we will be here, the same LaSalle in some ways, a better LaSalle in many others.

"Keep in touch" — that has become a pretty trite expression. Still, that is our hope. Alumni gatherings, of course, will allow you to do that, but maybe in this quiet moment of reading this message you could pick up the phone and call that favorite professor, that classmate you have not talked to for some time, or that counselor who helped you through a problem when you were at LaSalle. Maybe in the near future you can visit us, renew friendships and reminisce a little.

LaSalle is a place where you can just "drop in" and find a friendly face. For those of us who work in higher education, there are few rewards as great as seeing the "fruits of our labor" — you.
Welcome back!

Dedication

Brother John P. Dondero, F.S.C., Ph.D.

When asked why he joined the Christian Brothers, Brother John Dondero replied, "When I was in high school, I admired them and wanted to be like them. They were men who were not only intelligent, influential and great athletes, they were very easy to talk to, they were my educators and my friends." He continued, "Some people are 'called' by God for religious vocation, maybe my 'calling' could be described more accurately by saying that it was hero-worship — I wanted to be like my educators." He joined the Christian Brothers in 1940, and now he is the hero.

For thirty-two years, Brother Dondero has shared his love, compassion, and dedication to teaching with the La Salle University community. His warm smile and gentle, reassuring voice have encouraged many students and friends to achieve excellence in their lives. He has helped to bring the Psychology department from one office and one classroom/lab to the multi-faceted and balanced department it is today. As well as contributing to the counseling and humanistic area of the department, he has directed his influence toward developing a very diverse experimental program. A multi-faceted person himself, he has taught in the Graduate Pastoral counseling program, in the Graduate Theology program, in the Communications Department, in the Biology Department and in the Honors Program. He has been honored for his service by having the Psychology Department lounge named after him, and by the close relationships he has maintained with his students. Brother Dondero is truly an extraordinary man.

Students describe Brother Dondero as a very intense, but friendly person who keeps the class interested by promoting very lively discussion. One senior stated, "Brother Dondero is one of the most intriguing teachers I've had. He is inspiring and personable. He is always willing to listen and talk with his students." Brother's method in his Honors Effective Communication class is said to buck all previous teaching styles. He created this class and is celebrated for it. "It is disturbing that Brother might be leaving, because the class is just amazing," says one of his students.

In addition to being an incredible teacher, Brother Dondero is quite a dynamic person. In the words of a fellow Brother, "Jack is just dynamite, you can't keep up with him!" The Brothers who live at Roncalli House explain how "Jack" found the residence on 12th Street and brought them together: "Jack pulled us together. He got us the house and really got the place started. He is a one man facilities crew — he paints, mows the lawn, and really keeps the house running." Brother Molyneaux commented that Brother Dondero has some very curious traits. "Jack is the most punctual person I know. He arrives at an appointment at least fifteen minutes beforehand. Yet, on vacation he does not wear a watch, and if you go on vacation with him you don't wear a watch either. He is a paradox!" As a private person, Brother Dondero has a wonderful sense of humor. He is a willing schemer in practical jokes and enjoys arranging surprise parties. Brother is also a great squash player who loves classical music and shopping through mail order catalogues.

As a scholar, Brother Dondero has written several books, including one concerning the pressures of religious life. He has been to Japan and Norway. Colleagues who have worked with him have been amazed by his keen powers of perception, his meticulous skill as an analyst, and his organizational ability. His most important achievement, however, has been his work at La Salle. He has described La Salle as, "A great place to work. La Salle has all the marvelous growing pains of an institution changing from a College to a University." He is also the President of the Faculty Senate, and he admits with a smile that, "I am the person you both want and hate on your committee, because I ask the right questions."

Brother Dondero is, indeed, a tremendous asset to this University, especially to the students. He will be greatly missed by all of those who had the privilege of knowing him. With immense appreciation and love we dedicate the 1992 La Salle Explorer to Brother John P. Dondero.

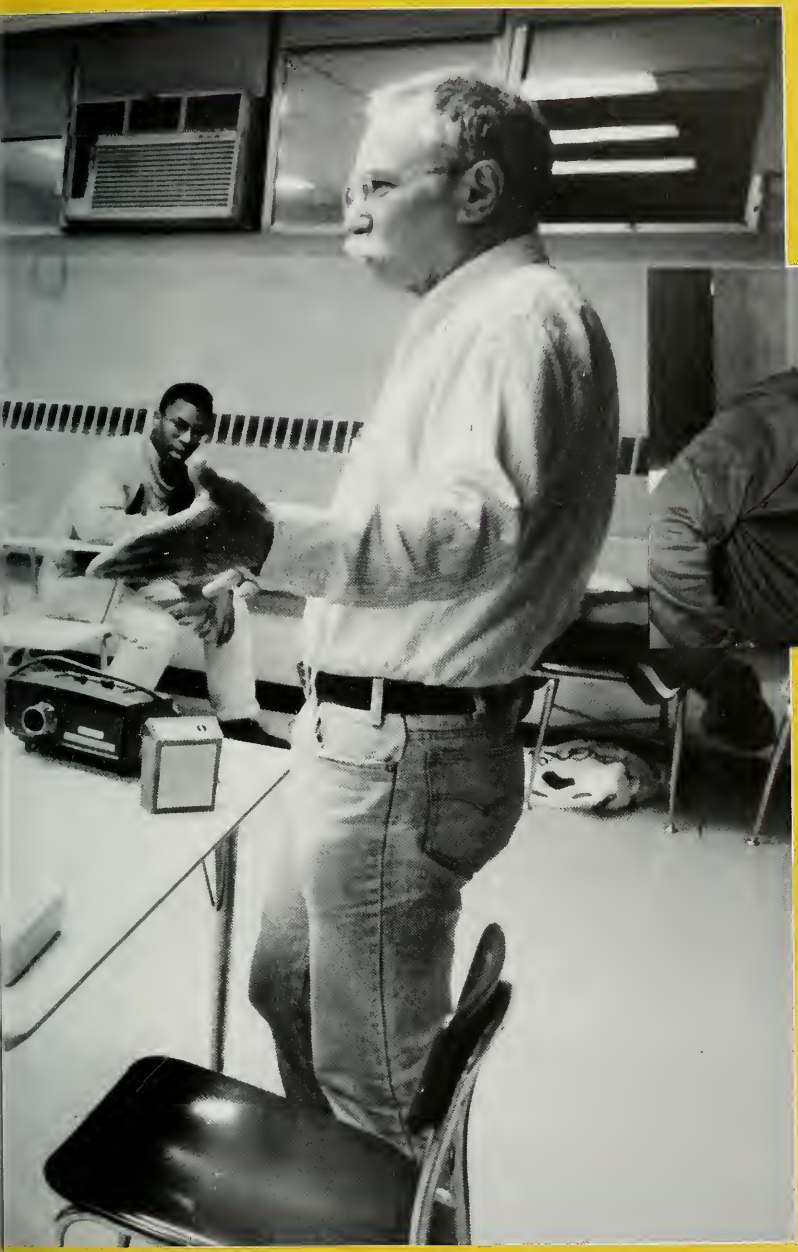
Don't Dream It Be It!



For four years they've been our teachers, mentors, confidantes and friends — these are the people who have shaped our educational experience — the Faculty and Administration of La Salle University. We've loved them for their encouragement and assistance, we've loathed them for their final exams and endless forms, but always we've respected them for their dedication to us, the students.

When reflecting on our time at La Salle, we may not recall the subject of the history paper done in second semester sophomore year, but we will remember the person who took a moment of time to answer a question, to give a piece of advice or to ask "How are you?" (and really want to know.) At La Salle, where teaching comes first, students know they are a priority. To the Administration and Faculty members who continue to make us feel like an integral part of the La Salle Community, we say Thank You.

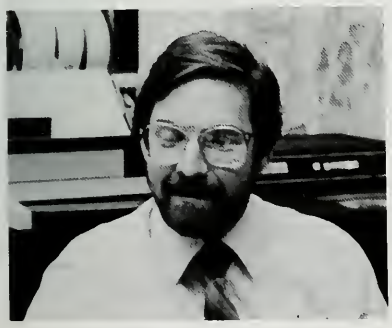
Longo and La Salle on Cable TV

On the first day of classes back in September, did you notice anything different in the Union Building? If you said, "Television monitors carrying the La Salle TV Network," then you're not only observant, but correct. The person responsible for this addition to La Salle's campus is Dr. Stephen Longo, the Director Of Academic Computing and a member of the La Salle community since 1971.



Dr. Steven Longo

About four or five years ago, Dr. Longo went to Brother Mollenhauer, who was then Provost, to discuss the idea of a La Salle TV network. With the addition of the satellite dishes on campus, the increased availability of cable television in Philadelphia, and the expansion of La Salle's campus, Dr. Longo felt a TV network would be an asset to the La Salle campus. Brother Mollenhauer agreed. An experimental trial run was conducted in the Olney and Wister Computer Labs last year before this year's successful introduction.

Today, in addition to the Union Building, monitors are located in Olney, Holroyd, the L-Stop, and Haymen Hall. Next year, Dr. Longo hopes to install monitors in the Connelly Library, the residence halls, and the new communications buildings.

Dr. Longo also predicts unlimited possibilities for the La Salle Network. He sees it as an additional way to communicate information across the campus. As an example, he recommends taping a Concert and Lecture presentation and televising it at night so that Evening Division students have an opportunity to hear the lecture. As Dr. Longo points out, "The TV Network is a way to draw this expanding campus closer."

Unity and Community = Br. Chip's Vision

The Campus Ministry, long ago known as the Chaplain's office, is the source of much community volunteer, Greek, and of course, religious activity. Br. Charles Echelmeier, Director of Campus Ministry uses his gifts to support and improve La Salle University.

Br. Charles "Chip" Echelmeier, was born in Philadelphia and was raised in Margate, New Jersey. Br. Chip received his Bachelor of Arts in English from Franklin and Marshall College. After entering the Christian Brothers in June of 1965, he pursued and received a Masters of English from Temple University and a Masters of Theology from Notre Dame University. In addition to this diverse education, Br. Chip also studied Hebrew Language and Jewish study at Gratz College and Beit HaAM in Jerusalem.

Br. Chip's first position at La Salle was located in the Resident Life Office. Here, he worked as an assistant Director of Resident Life. The following year, he moved to the Campus Ministry Center because he felt that his "education and talents could be better used in the community." Finally, in 1980, Br. Chip became the Director of the Campus Ministry.

In the basement of the College Hall and throughout the University, Br. Chip fulfills many responsibilities. He is an integral part of several university committees, including the Student Affairs Committee. Besides his administrative responsibilities, Br. Chip feels that as the Campus Ministry Director, it is his responsibility "to remind the University of their mission." He also feels that the religious center "cannot be departmentalized. It must permeate the University."

Br. Chip also has several hopes for the Campus Ministry Center and the University as a whole. For instance, when people call the worship space the Student's Chapel, a whole segment of the University is ignored, the faculty. According to Br. Chip, all activities should include all members of the La Salle Community. The students and the faculty should work together. This community involvement would help counterbalance some of the lost family atmosphere that used to exist.

Br. Charles Echelmeier's diverse educational background and the wealth of his experience gives him great insight into the La Salle Community. Hopefully, many groups will continue to heed his words of community spirit.

Dr. Texter: Committed and Caring

The warm, personal atmosphere — That is why Lynne Texter chose La Salle. With offers from schools in New York and California and the prestige of an Outstanding Teacher's Award from New York University at Buffalo, this was no small affair. Since the fall of 1989 Dr. Texter has contributed her talents to the Communications Department. Her experience in public relations makes her a valuable resource for students and faculty alike. Dr. Texter's involvement on campus as Moderator for WEXP, and as a member of the Alcohol Advisory Board along with the work she does with the student press and affairs committee marks her as an asset to La Salle University. However, La Salle is not the only community which appreciates Dr. Texter's efforts, she was named to the Who's Who of Professional and Business Women 1990.

A Rochester native, Dr. Texter earned her Bachelor's degree from Ithaca College, her master's from Syracuse University and her doctorate from New York University at Buffalo. While Texter realized the importance of education, she also cultivated her personal interests in softball and cycling illustrating that the ancient Greek notion of "a healthy mind and a healthy body" is not lost in the 20th century. Even more than this, though, Lynne Texter, according to her students, is an understanding and caring individual. The friendly and caring faculty and students which drew Dr. Texter to La Salle University are glad to now count her among them.

Students and Teaching, priorities for Br. Emery

Ask any Christian Brother what his primary purpose is, he will reply, "to teach." This is precisely the response Brother Emery Mollenhauer gave, and the reason he returned to full-time teaching after thirty years of administration. "After all," said Brother Emery, "our first call is to teach." Most new students know Brother Emery through the English Department, where he now has a full-time class load. Trace back a few years, however, and one can see that his roots at La Salle are quite different.

Brother Emery received his Bachelor's degree from Catholic University, and his master's and PH.D. from the University of Pittsburgh. After teaching high school in Pittsburgh, he came to La Salle. He held the position of Dean of the Evening Division for nine years, then that of Provost for twenty-one years. During these thirty years, he taught part-time in the English Department. He also assisted in the development of the Tenure Program and the Scholarship Program which are currently implemented at La Salle. So why, after these thirty years, did he decide to return to teaching?

Br. Emery Mollenhauer

Brother Emery admitted that any longer in the administration would have been too long. His love for teaching made it easier to leave his position as Provost. In addition to his full-time teaching, he is now on the committee for hiring in the English Department and has sat on Hahnemann Hospital's University Board for four years. Does he miss administration? Says Brother Emery, "the only things I care about now are my students and my teaching."

Antics, Algebra and Andrilli

"Did you hear the one about the two guys who . . . " is a phrase similar to what one can expect to hear at the beginning of a typical class taught by Dr. Stephen Andrilli.

Dr. Andrilli received his bachelor's degree in Mathematics from La Salle College and his master's degree from Rutger's University. After many years of intense study in Abstract Algebra, he completed his doctoral dissertation in Finite Group Theory.

When Dr. Andrilli began his career at La Salle, he taught in the progressing field of Computer Science and was co-chair of the Mathematics and Computer Science Department. During this time, he studied Computer Science at Temple University. Recently, Dr. Andrilli has been needed to teach in the Mathematical Sciences, due to the decline in matriculating Computer Science majors. He has taught an honors math class and would like to establish a course curriculum for an honors class that deals with the history of mathematics.

Dr. Andrilli is dedicated to the art of teaching. He expresses interest in his students by making himself available to discuss course work, offer advice concerning a given career, or to simply "chat." Many Mathematics majors have been influenced, encouraged and motivated by Dr. Andrilli.

During his many years of teaching, Dr. Andrilli has developed some very effective pedagogical methods. He has found that assigning homework problems to students, "forces them to keep on top of their workload and gives them the opportunity to increase their grade." Dr. Andrilli also brings a part of himself to the classroom — his wonderful sense of humor. Starting class off with a joke, dropping a pun now and then, or tossing chalk at the clock as it buzzes for the end of class, is his way of keeping students' attention and making class more interesting; he just does what comes naturally.

In addition to teaching classes, Dr. Andrilli is involved in various University committees. In recent years, he has been writing and editing a Linear Algebra textbook. In his collaboration with a professor from St. Joseph's University, Dr. Andrilli hopes to make his life-long dream of "seeing his name in print" come true. During his free time, Dr. Andrilli enjoy's classical music and masterpiece Theatre. However, his weeknights are spent primarily grading and preparing for class. He works very diligently to ensure his classes are well constructed, understandable and, of course, a lot of fun.

Kerlin — the dreamer, the inquirer, the doubter.

"As a kid I had a lot of religious questions; I was a dreamer, an inquirer and a doubter." This is Dr. Michael Kerlin's description of himself as a youth and, consequently, the start of his career as a student of life who shares his knowledge with the La Salle Community. Dr. Kerlin's inquisitive nature and acquisitive mind led him "to reading a lot of books that supposedly answered these questions." Picking up on this curiosity, a cousin acted as mentor by always engaging the young Kerlin in philosophical debates. Although senior Eric Christ commented, "He's out there, way out there," most of his students find him down to earth, especially when he displays his musical talent by playing the penny whistle for his classes. According to Dr. Kerlin, "if you make it fun, it will be interesting."

While this teacher has endeavored to incite the love of philosophy in his students, he has pursued his own goals not only by obtaining degrees in Philosophy, Religion and Business, but also by learning to speak languages and play musical instruments. Led by his own interests, Kerlin has learned Russian in his spare time and is now in the process of learning Gallic. Inspired by his children, Dr. Kerlin has taken up the violin.

Dr. Kerlin has been teaching at La Salle University for 25 years (20 of which he has been chair of the philosophy department). Although, he paused when asked his philosophy of teaching and asked for more time to consider the question, (it may be a few years before an answer becomes apparent) Dr. Kerlin does have one wish for La Salle University and its students: "I hope that we will go happily together looking for those answers that led me into philosophy for a long, long time to come."

Political Science

Dr. Brogan: Opening the Doors to Critical Thinking

When Joseph Brogan visited his high school alma mater a few years after graduation, a former science teacher said he hoped Brogan majored in science in college. He replied that he had — Political Science. Though the natural sciences were of interest to Brogan, his focus both in and outside the classroom was on politics.

Dr. Brogan admits that as a college student in the late 1960s he was certainly not alone in his pursuit of political study. He recalls that while he was an undergraduate at La Salle, politics was one of the largest majors — a reflection of the times. The civil rights movement and the Vietnam War inexorably challenged people to learn about political systems. Brogan himself concentrated on political philosophy at La Salle, and was encouraged by teachers to actively pursue academic work which would encompass this aspect of political science.

Brogan received his M.A. and PH.D. from the University of Notre Dame and explains that his dissertation was a study of his own discipline. "The name 'political science,' " he explains, "came about in the 1950s and 1960s and grew out of a movement to make the study of politics more objective and more critical." He adds that his own specialty, political theory/philosophy, has grown in popularity and precision during the last decade. Brogan's definition of this type of study reflects back upon his initial reasons for pursuing political scholarship; he notes that "the study of politics is rooted in the study of what it means to be human." For this reason, Brogan believes that political science is not technically a science, but rather a study which begins with the nature of the individual and works its way out to encompass the goals, tensions, triumphs and failures of the individual in the world.

Brogan has taught in the Philosophy department as well as in Political Science. He is also a former Director of Evening Admissions at La Salle. Among other positions, he has been secretary of the Faculty Senate and advisor of the student political affairs magazine. Despite his roles as teacher and administrator, Brogan admits a certain romanticism in the view of La Salle that he had as a student and that he still has today. "La Salle," he states, "opened doors to critical thinking and inquiry that many students like myself had never seen before." As a teacher, Dr. Brogan has tried to carry on that mission to his own students. Like a science, politics calls for careful examination of all facts and issues. As a liberal art, the study of politics also deals with the ambiguities and complexities of human nature. Dr. Joseph Brogan, scientist-philosopher, keeps both of these traditions alive in political study at La Salle.

Pritchard's Perceptions on Psychology

Tucked away in the recesses of the Holroyd building, you can find Dr. Faye Pritchard, one of La Salle's few full-time women psychology professors. In fact when Dr. Pritchard arrived at La Salle in 1972, she was one of the first full-time women professors in the entire school.

Dr. Joan Faye Pritchard

Back then, this recent PH.D graduate of Ohio Wesleyan and Delaware had worked extensively on research projects both as subject and experimenter, but she chose to devote herself more to the instruction of students. Dr. Pritchard's specialty is in sensory and perception, learning and methodology with a minor in math and statistical methods. With a background like that she was the obvious choice to teach the subject that fills all psychology students with dread, Experimental Psych. She also teaches an Intro Psychology course, but she is known most for Experimental. She tries to introduce her students to the specifics of research writing while they gain hands-on experience in the Lab. This experience is essential to Dr. Pritchard who believes that students sometimes miss all of the intricate steps involved in a research project, otherwise.

Over the years, Dr. Pritchard has noticed, and has been a part of two major changes in the La Salle community. One was a massive curriculum change, which Dr. Pritchard worked on herself in a committee and which she feels had a tremendous effect on the kinds of courses that have resulted. Also Dr. Pritchard cites a more subtle but, nonetheless, important change in the overall attitude of the students, especially toward women. The males here have gained a respect for their female peers and professors, thanks in part, no doubt, to the efforts of women like Dr. Pritchard.

Expanding Horizons with the New BSW

La Salle University is the only Catholic university in the area which offers a nationally accredited Bachelor of Social Work (BSW) degree program. Graduates of the BSW program are looked upon favorably by employers and by graduate schools because of the reputation of this program within the social work community.

"Social work is really an exciting field to be in at the moment," explained Dr. Sybil Montgomery, assistant professor of Sociology and Social Work program director. "People often think that social workers only work with the poor, but actually they work with all different people who have problems in their life, not just the poor or the abused." An advantage for students in the social work field these days is that "Jobs are available!" Montgomery exclaimed. Of social work graduates, 100 percent of them are either attending graduate school or are employed with annual starting salaries of $22,500 to $26,000. Senior social work major Andy Huck noted, "I've had two job offers already!"

The BSW cuts graduate school time in half. "Instead of taking 58 credits, I would only have to take 28," explained Huck. Because the BSW program is pushing the field to the limits, Master of Social Work programs have had to expand in recent years.

The BSW program requires freshman to participate in 40 hours of observational work, juniors to attend one day of field placement each week, and seniors to be involved in two days of weekly field placement.

Joan Barr, a senior social work major, said "You get a well rounded education at La Salle . . . the (BSW) program here teaches a generalist approach; students aren't limited to any specific area in the field."

After receiving the BSW, students are considered professionals, working in such areas as child welfare, mental health, family services, probation counseling, public welfare, and aid for the elderly.

Nursing at La Salle — Accepting the Challenges of Modern Times

To most students, a La Salle education means the neverending quest for time — time for study, time for extracurricular activities, a part-time job, the ever-important social life and, when allowed, time for needed sleep. For many undergraduates, it would be almost inconceivable to work forty hours or more a week, raise and support a family, and participate in extra-curricular activities in addition to coping with the enormous amounts of stress associated with higher education. However, this is how most La Salle nursing majors spend their time. How do they do it? No one knows for sure, but Nursing Department Chair, Dr. Gloria Donnelly, has a few answers.

Dr. Donnelly explained that the twelve-year-old nursing program has a unique, flexible structure that easily adapts to students' hectic schedules. Unlike courses in many other departments, courses for the B.S.N. are offered during the day, evening and on weekends. Donnelly, who founded the program, said that flexibility is a must. She explained that all students are required to hold a Pennsylvania State Registered Nursing License. This means that most nursing majors had already opened the doors to the "real world," having careers that would be difficult to leave for the pursuit of a full-time education.

If nursing majors have already established secure careers, then why would they need more education? The answer is simple, today, nursing is a comprehensive career, requiring continual education because of new breakthroughs. The nursing field has certainly come a long way since the days of Florence Nightingale. La Salle's nursing department educates students about contemporary methods and the latest medical breakthroughs. In addition, the program, "gives nurses a broader view of nursing, primary care activities, health assessment and nursing research," said Donnelly. This experience, Donnelly added, enables nurses to climb the ladder into management and leadership positions in their fields.

In order to earn a B.S.N., students must complete the same foundation and core courses required of all La Salle students. Nursing majors are also required to take a number of painstakingly difficult, time consuming science courses. And, if that isn't enough, nursing majors must take three clinical courses, which provide hands-on experience, working in local hospitals and clinics.

To add to their time restraints, many nursing students participate in the Registered Nurses Organization (RNO), a club which sponsors health fairs and promotes well-being on campus. La Salle's top nursing students are invited to join the campus chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, a national honor society for nursing majors.

Even though the question of, "how do the over four hundred La Salle nursing majors do it?" still remains, two things are certain — Nursing majors should be admired for their ability to cope with chaotic schedules and still earn a degree, and it is certain that La Salle's nursing program gives a comprehensive, experience-oriented approach that guarantees success in the health care field.

Although the La Salle nursing program is still relatively new, Dr. Donnelly speculated that further advancements are being examined. The department is considering adding a program for those who do not possess a nursing license. This program will allow entering freshman to earn a degree in one of the most challenging majors La Salle has to offer: Nursing.

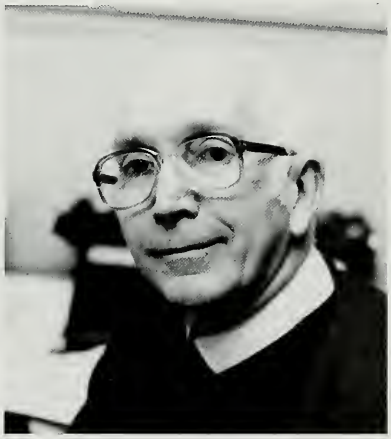
Br. Bender: Dedicated to Continuing the Tradition

The students in our Continuing Studies Program have been hiding a secret from the rest of the La Salle Community — Brother Joseph Bender. Brother Bender has been an integral part of La Salle since he first came here in 1973 as a counselor in the Evening Division. In the nineteen years since he has been here, Brother has established a wonderful reputation as a counselor and an academic advisor for the students in the Continuing Studies Program.

After he received his Bachelor's Degree in Classical Languages from the Catholic University of America in 1949, Brother became a Latin teacher at West Catholic High School for Boys in Philadelphia, and retained that position until 1966; he spent the next three years of his life teaching in the Harrisburg Archdiocese. Before he left Philadelphia, Brother had accumulated a Master's and a Doctorate Degree from the University of Pennsylvania in Classical Languages. Upon his return to Philadelphia in 1969, he resumed his position at West Catholic High School for Boys before coming to La Salle in 1973.

Originally from Western Pennsylvania, Brother has now become an adopted son of Philadelphia, although he coyly admits that his heart still belongs to the Pittsburgh Steelers. In addition to being a football fan, Brother's other interests also reflect the diversity of his personality: basketball, reading (he is a major Tom Clancey fan), his job, politics, world events, and, most importantly to him, La Salle and our community. In fact, the only motive for which Brother has is to help the students in the Continuing Studies Program attain their goals, and direct their motivation towards their studies. His genuine sense of interest in La Salle and in the students of La Salle is evident in everything he does.

Brother's dedication to his work goes above and beyond the description of his position as an academic advisor and counselor for the Continuing Studies Students. On one occasion, a student, who was preparing to graduate, came to Brother because he wanted to know if he could fit some Latin classes into his schedule. When Brother became aware of the student's interest in Latin he advised him that he would be unable to graduate on the expected date if he added the classes into his schedule. So instead, Brother offered his services as a tutor for the student, working on his personal time and working around the student's daily schedule. Brother has become a very important part of our community because he does more than just give students information and guidance, he becomes their friend.



Br. Joseph Bender

Brother's personal relationships with his students are extended far beyond his office and the student's graduation. In fact, there has been several occasions on which former students have returned to visit with him only to show their appreciation for his hard work and dedication towards their education. His colleagues describe him as a "workaholic" who will take time out of his schedule to accommodate any student at any time. He meets with students on his personal time, and also serves as an Evening Advisor at La Salle's Branch Campus in Northeast Philadelphia.

Brother Bender is the Heart and Soul of the Continuing Studies Program, his dedication to his work, to La Salle, and to his students goes above and beyond the call of duty. Brother's only wish is that when he leaves La Salle, our community will appreciate and respect the valuable contribution which he has made to our school. If the feelings which our community has for him now are any indication, then it appears that his wish may have already come true.

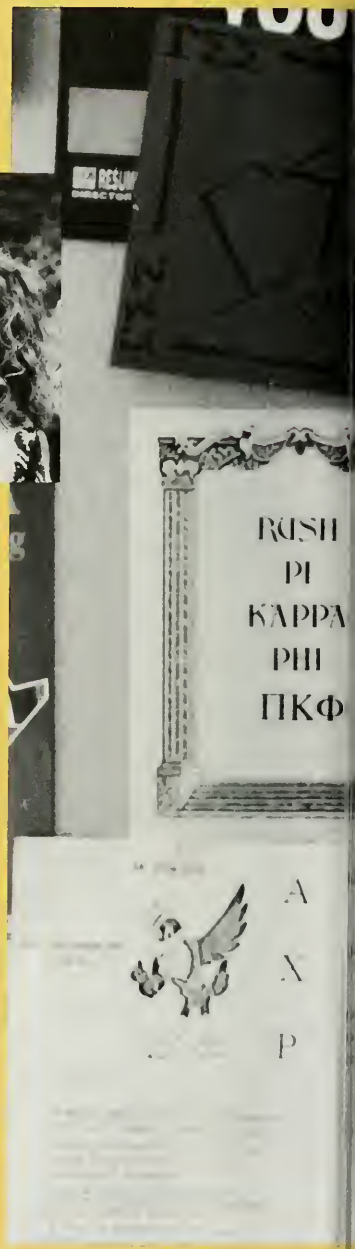
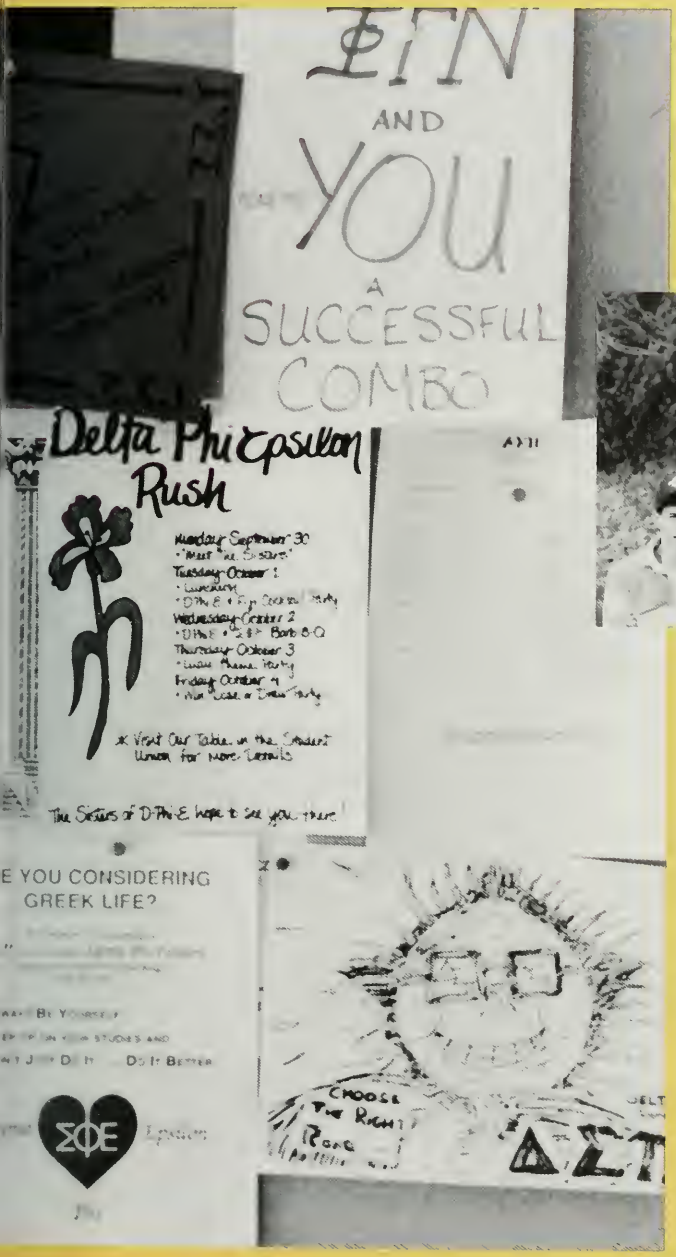
TAU LAMBDA KAPPA? No, Tender Loving Care.

GREEK WEEK A sign of diversity and unity.

Sisters show support for themselves as well as the entire Greek system.



Don't Dream It Be It!



PLEDGES Continuing the search for excellence.

What do you dream of being when you finish college? "I want to be a success in my career." "A help to my community." "A good wife." "The best dad." "Happy."

These are all great aspirations which could be heard from any student at La Salle or any university but why are they at the beginning of the Greek section? They are here to symbolize to what extent Greeks play in dream-making.

The entire Greek system is founded upon the ideals of sisterhood and brotherhood. Once young adults join a fraternity or sorority, they begin a journey of growth which will continue forever. As they mature with their brothers and sisters, their dreams also mature. They talk among themselves; fantasizing about what the future holds for them.

Dreams without action are unfinished thoughts. Greeks do not allow this to happen. The community they form works to help mold an individual who will work for his or her dreams. The act of achieving these goals may be difficult but it is made to know that a sister or brother is there to help.

All this is why so much space in this book has been dedicated to the Greek system of La Salle. It is to let the reader look at the friendships in the photos and wander what these people are dreaming about.

Much time and effort were put into these twenty-two pages and by the end, the editor realized he had grown in his own fraternal experience. By seeing the inside of other Greeks, a larger picture was visualized in which each sorority and fraternity had its place. Viewing the following pages, the reader will hopefully understand what the editor is trying to express.

So, what are you dreaming about?

Philanthropies and community service both play a major part in the Delta Phi Epsilon sorority. Two of their national philanthropies are the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and the Foundation for Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders. In addition to these, community service projects include a Crop Walk for Hunger, helping to build low income houses in the city of Philadelphia, and sponsorship of the La Salle Man of the 90's contest, with proceeds given to Dr. Kelly for the care of his daughter, Susan.

Esse Quam Videri, "To be rather than to seem to be," is the motto that D Phi E was founded on. The unique qualities that each sister brings forth unto the whole helps to explain the creed that defines the bond that they call everlasting sisterhood.

Hopes for the future and memories of the past add to the essence of their sisterhood. In the future they are confident in the fact that their tradition will persevere and Delta Phi Epsilon will continue in excellence. As for the past, President Elizabeth Wagner speaks for the whole sorority as she states, "Our memories are ones that can not be expressed through words. They lie deep within us, special to each individual sister. We carry them in our hearts and you can see them in our pride. Our memories will never fade, for we are sisters forever. Y.I.T.S.!"

Gamma Sigma Sigma has the dubious distinction of being the oldest sorority on campus. Founded over fifteen years ago, this national sorority concentrates primarily on being a service organization. Gamma Sig sponsors different fund-raisers for each holiday throughout the school year. For Christmas this past year, they sponsored a "Toys for Tots" drive. Also, they are closely tied to the March of Dimes and the Sunshine Foundation. The motto of this sorority deals with community service and promoting fellowship among La Salle students and the revolving community.

Consisting of nearly 75 percent commuters, Gamma Sig is looking towards the future by increasing ideas of service around campus. This past year, present sisters made an effort to contact the founding sisters of Gamma Sigma Sigma and had an alumni dinner which they hope to continue each year.

Gamma Phi Beta was founded as a half social, half service sorority. They are involved in various community service activities such as visits to orphanages, volunteer work in soup kitchens for the homeless, and trips to Building Blocks. However, their national philanthropy is "A Camp for Girls," Camp Sechelt. A portion of all of the organization's money goes to these underprivileged girls, and the sisters keep in touch with them through letters.

As stated by Christa Scott, President of Gamma Phi Beta, their ideal is "to promote the highest type of womanhood." They pursue that in everything they do — by living together, through philanthropies, and by learning from each other.

The sisres of Gamma Phi Beta have great hopes for the future and for Greek organizations in general. They would like to keep their chapter, as well as their sorority name, as strong as it is now by promoting enthusiasm and pride. Christa Scott comments that "we as sisters in Gamma Phi Beta hope to see a continuing tradition of not only our sorority, but of all Greeks who are positive role models for other organizations on the La Salle University campus."

The Gamma Phi Beta motto, "Founded upon a rock," stands for stability in what the four founding sisters created. This stable belief has lasted since 1874 and will keep going throughout the years. As stated by Scott, "Gamma Phi Beta wants to be remembered as being a diverse group of girls pulling different ideas together to become as close of friends as we can, while giving as much as possible to the La Salle community."

The sisters of Phi Gamma Nu want to mix business with pleasure. Phi Gamma Nu is a business society fraternity in which the sisters' commonality lies not only in the business area, but also in the desire to build strong and lasting friendships.

Phi Gamma Nu is made up of business majors and minors concerned with becoming connected to the business world. The sisters host special business speakers and they also have a Mentor Committee: a group of alumni who assist them with their careers and "help get a foot in the door."Phi Gamma Nu is in the process of rebuilding since many of its members were lost to graduation and President Tricia Valentine hopes to grow with the new sisters. Women with a common academic interest develop close friendships that continue throughout the years because of Phi Gamma Nu. They grow together, complementing one another while striving for success in the world of business. There is a unique closeness among them.

Founder's Day is special to the sisters; a time to rekindle old friendships and meet new sisters. Retreats and formals also serve to bring the sisters closer together as does their involvement in volunteering for drug and alcohol abuse programs.

The sisters symbolize their fraternity with a red rose and they strive to live up to their motto: Esse Quam Videri, "to be rather than to seem."

Phi Gamma Nu looks toward the future, hoping to expand the fraternity, yet also hoping to keep their special closeness. The experience of Phi Gamma Nu has added much value to sisters' academic and social lives here at La Salle.

"Sisters growing together," is one way President Kathy Lafferty describes her sorority. Alpha Theta Alpha consists of almost fifty sisters whose common beliefs lie in honesty, openness, and hard work. Dependability is another quality that the sisters are proud of; at any time, any place, there is always someone there for them.

ATA was founded at La Salle in the late 1970's and the founding sister, Barbara Travada, is now the sorority's advisor. One main aspect that distinguishes ATA is that it is a local sorority. Another aspect is that there is no bidding system during the rush period. Instead, the rushees sign a list on a first-come first-serve basis. The sisters prefer this system because it eliminates the pre-judgement that sometimes accompanies the bidding system.

Social services are a priority for ATA. This is seen by each sister being required to do at least one individual service a semester. They also come together to perform group services such as tutoring, Special Olympics, volunteering at Einstein Hospital, and fund raising for handicapped and special children.

Inductions, initiations, and retreats are times for the sisters to strengthen their ties and to share good thoughts and feelings. Retreats are especially meaningful because they are prayer-oriented and help to better the sorority.

The green and white rose is the symbol for ATA; it signifies purity and growth. Some of the goals Lafferty stresses are closeness, unification, respect, and service. She emphasizes that in the future, she hopes her sorority will not be afraid to change and grow for the betterment of ATA as a whole.

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

Tau Kappa Epsilon, a longtime presence on La Salle's campus, continued its active stance this past school year. TKE helped with the Red Cross Blood Drive again with Delta Phi Epsilon and Sigma Phi Epsilon and participated in the annual food drive for the homeless sponsored by 94 WYSP. These projects, along with contributions to Respiratory Distress Syndrome Association and sponsorship of Relationship Week and Alcohol Awareness Week programs, combined to help reach TKE's ideals of Love, Charity, and Esteem.

The intramurals felt Tau Kappa Epsilon's presence as the brothers made impressive showings in volleyball, basketball, and softball.

President Jason Clare sums up his hopes for TKE: "To continue the tradition of excellence with the nation's largest fraternity that challenges college men to develop themselves, their talents, and their abilities in pursuit of personal excellence."

Being the youngest fraternity on campus, Sigma Phi Epsilon has quite a large job in front of itself to become an integral part of La Salle life. Great strides have already been taken in their year and a half of existence. Taking part in the Red Cross blood drive, giving a good show at the pledge olympics, and achieving one of the largest pledges classes in the fall rush, Sig Ep is making certain it is a permanent part of La Salle.

Sig Ep at La Salle started in a dorm room in 1989 with four men. It rapidly expanded as it moved from a colony to a chartered chapter and held a membership of over sixty men. Its ideals of Virtues, Diligence, and Brotherly Love attracted men who wished to work for something new in their university yet old in tradition. They created a chapter with what they considered to be a proper balance of social and service activities.

Philanthropy is important to Sig Ep. It claims Multiple Sclerosis collection, American Cancer Society, and Habitat for Humanity as projects, in addition to local endeavors with Alpha Theta Alpha and Student Patrol.

Searching for the "Balanced Man," Sigma Phi Epsilon has gained members who are active in all areas of campus life. The blending of abilities into a mosaic of manhood benefits all who call Sig Ep their fraternity.

The end of the year saw the graduation of many of the fraternity's original members. It was a sad time for all and yet another step for the group. Growing into the role it designated it would achieve will be difficult for Sigma Phi Epsilon, but if its present pace is continued, the goal will soon be reached.

Sigma Phi Lambda, Spirit, Fidelity, and Leadership! Founded at La Salle University in 1935, as a spirit club organized on a fraternal basis, college men considering membership were first to prove enthusiasm and involvement in all areas of La Salle College life. This idea still holds true today. Members of Sigma Phi Lambda fraternity participate and excel in a wide range of campus activities: Student Government, Writing Fellows, English and Communication Departmental Boards, Honors Program, Dean's List, Gavel Society, Campus Ministry, Soccer, Ice Hockey, and Crew.

With the onset of World War II, the fraternity experienced an inactive period. This spring, Sigma Phi Lambda celebrated the Thirtieth Anniversary of their Reactivation in 1961. The celebration at the Spring Formal included the attendance of the 1961 Reactivation Pledge Class and members of the Founding Class of 1935.

As Lambda is not nationally affiliated, the strength of the fraternity comes from phenomenal alumni support. One of the biggest events of the year is Alumni Weekend. Significant alumni include Dan Rodden, Roland Holroyd, and Brother Leonard, for the quadrangle or "Quad" is named.

Founded as a social service fraternity, Sigma Phi Lambda is very active in working with its service sponsor, St. Gabriel's Hall, a Christian Brother-run facility for court-committed youth of the Philadelphia area ages 12-18.

Founded on February 14, 1975, Alpha Chi Rho at La Salle University is known as the Valentine's Day Chapter. Faithful to the Exeter Motto: "Be men," President Jay Romeo asserts, "We try to teach our members to be responsible for their actions."

There are four landmarks that the fraternity brothers have pledged to uphold: "Membership for those who are prepared to realize in word and deed, the brotherhood of men. The insistence of high and clean moral standards. The paramount duty of brotherly love among members. Judgement not by externals but by intrinsic worth."

Fraternity members are active in diverse areas of La Salle life: Dean's List, golf team, wrestling team, intramural sports, Faculty-Departmental offices, and peer education.

Alpha Chi Rho's main charity is the Church of the Redeemer, located on the edge of La Salle's campus. In addition to fundraisers, the fraternity provides tutoring services for the children of the parish community. Other philanthropies include Marines Toys for Tots and Building Blocks.

Alpha Chi Rho takes an active role in bringing diverse groups together by cosponsoring a speaker and Martin Luther King vigil for Black History Month, and by sponsoring a date rape seminar for Relationship Week. Romeo comments, "With the high visibility of Greeks on La Salle's campus, it is in our best interest to promote involvement with La Salle and the surrounding community."

"A chain is only as strong as its weakest link." This is Delta Sigma Pi's motto and they have spent many years working for strong links.

Delta Sig has the responsibility of being the only male business fraternity on campus. Due to their female counterpart, Phi Gamma Nu, Delta Sig has not become co-ed which makes them the only all-male chapter in the nation.

The members of Delta Sigma Pi are prepared for the business world through activities they sponsor. Speakers and guest lecturers let the men know "what it's like out there," and how to survive.

In addition to these activities, Delta Sig also sponsors many community service projects. They work in the Soup Kitchens in Philadelphia and they have a canned food drive for the Brotherhood Mission. For the La Salle community, they sponsor speakers on Drug and Alcohol Addiction.

In addition to the diversity of the group, Randy Giandonara says that he and his brothers realize that "unity is the key to brotherhood."

When the original brothers of Pi Kappa Phi founded their fraternity at the College of Charleston on December 10, 1904, one wonders if they realized how far it would go. Eighty-eight years later, their chapter at La Salle University is celebrating its tenth year anniversary. With this record, their motto, "Nothing shall ever tear us asunder," seems to be holding true.

The brothers of Pi Kap have followed their founders' wish to "extend the bonds of friendship." These bonds go outside the fraternity as the brothers involve themselves with the handicapped. Through a program at Widener University, they help disabled children learn how to swim. Their national philanthropy is PUSH, Post Understanding of the Severely Handicapped, which has been a part of the chapter from the start.

Archon Chuck Lannutti would like to see the diversity continue in the years to come. Citing such involvements as the IFSC, intramurals, and other campus activities, Lannutti hopes that the unity will continue through the common desire for lasting brotherhood.

RUSH WEEK

Rush Week. Tables inside the Union. Too many people. Sororities and Fraternities selling themselves, Difficulty getting into Intermissions. Was that all there was to it? Not exactly. One sorority sister described Rush Week as "the most important event" of her chapter. Rush, generally speaking, takes place year round as knowledge of the Greek system is expanded and interest raised. The weeks which are so named are only outward signs and the official acts. "A good Rush Chair works all semester and even over the summer," stated one proud fraternity member. It also involves events such as Meet the Brothers/Sisters, athletic games, movie nights, BBQ's, and anything else that a human mind could think of. It was a week of fun and decision and when it was over, what was most often said by the Greeks was, "Well, time to get ready for next semester."

OPEN HOUSE

Open House. Tables outside of Union. Too many people. La Salle selling itself. A festive air pervaded the cool day in November when La Salle University opened its doors and invited all those interested to come and look. The Greeks took part in what could have been termed a practice Rush Week. Even though those who were looking were not even in college yet, "it never hurts to start early," according to one fraternity brother. "They look interesting," related a high school senior in reference to the Greeks "I'll have to check them out if I come here."

The Greeks have long been active in Open House. Brother Gerald Fitzgerald, coordinator of the events, is always grateful for their participation especially in leading tours around campus.

As Open House displayed the long tradition of La Salle University excellence, so, too, did it demonstrate the dedication of the Fraternities and Sororities to their academic institution.

PLEDGE O

A Greek Tradition

"No more third places," a disgruntled fraternity cried as their representatives in the olympics paid no heed and brought home another one. No matter how they fared, each fraternity and sorority proved their support of their pledges as the loud cheering and screaming echoed through the streets of Philly. The early morning hour frightened some supporters away but as the day progressed, the playing field gradually filled. Events such as the mattress race, egg catch, keg toss, and three-legged race brought just as many laughs as screams of enthusiasm. The coordinated costumes worn by the pledges added that extra touch to make the day memorable.

When the points were totaled at the end, the glory of those with more did not outshine the glory of all who had formed stronger bonds of friendship.

Phi Kappa Theta: founded in 1969 and still around in 1992. Despite losing official campus recognition in the fall of 1991, Phi Kap was reinstated in the spring of 1992. Although they were not permitted to participate in campus activities under the guise of the Phi Kappa Theta fraternity, the members kept busy; they did not drop out of sight. The appeal they stated proved to the administration that "Phi Kap wanted to continue to serve the La Salle community."

The fraternity's philanthropies continued throughout the school year. These included Hopes for the Homeless, Good Shepherd neighborhood housing program, and St. Francis soup kitchens. They also participated in Alcohol Awareness Week on La Salle's campus.

The ideals of Phi Kap sum up its motivations and actions. The brothers feel they have a duty to man, self and parents, society, and God. A fraternity which follows ideals such as these can weather much harder times than the past months suffered by Phi Kap.

As the Phi Kap house stands, so does the fraternity it contains. With the work, dedication, and hope the members are putting into their brotherhood, Phi Kappa Theta will continue to be a part of the La Salle community.

Being an athlete and being one that can perform well on the collegiate level are often two entirely different creatures. The student-athletes at La Salle University have made a commitment not just to their teams and particular sports but also to their studies. Being a successful student-athlete does not mean just being a high scorer or a team captain but rather a combination of scholastic and extra-curricular activities. What is so special about college athletics is that often times, individuals are able to discover skills on the court which can be used in and out of the classroom. The lessons learned by these athletes are invaluable for their future whether it be in athletics or the real world. The next portion of this section demonstrates how our athletes have carried their dreams to their full realization.

And now a look at Fall 1991 . . .

EXPERIENCE LENDS A HAND

in helping young players pave future success

by John Schmitt

Coming into their 1991 season, the Explorers coached by Pat Farrell had much to look forward to. After a very successful 11-10-1 1990 season, the men's team was looking forward to better their 2nd place finish in the MAAC championships last season. However, losing such standout seniors as Bob Bradley, Joe Joyce, Sean Conroy and Mike Viola would definitely be difficult. The solution? Extraordinary performances and leadership from the class of 1992.

The season started quietly with a September afternoon game against fellow city rival, Drexel University. Despite battling hard for two halves, the Explorers lost by the smallest of margins 2-1. The next couple of weeks however proved to be kinder to the team as they went unbeaten in four games posting a 3-0-1 record.

After a couple of tough hard fought losses, the Explorers went on their most impressive streak of the season. Beginning on October 5th against Sienna, La Salle won eight of its next nine and at one point even boasted of a five game win streak. During their streak, the team was inspired by two victories against conference schools Canisius and Niagara. The team stockpiled thirteen goals while allowing just one.

It was in these games that the excellent senior leadership and bright future could be best seen. Seniors Georg Montag and John Williams led the way throughout the season. Together they provided thirteen goals and seventeen assists. However, the key offensive threat posed by the Explorers this year was by junior Jeff Van Tiem. Out of Conestoga High in Devon, Pa., Jeff put up some amazing numbers: nineteen goals and six assists for a team leading forty-four points. Besides goalkeeper Rich Scholer and Andrew Barrett, Van Tiem was the only player to start and play in all nineteen games. Congratulations should also be extended to departing seniors Herb Lottier and Dave Pancoast who will be sorely missed.

The future of men's soccer for La Salle is also quite promising. With the addition of eleven freshmen on this year's team, the squad will be very young for a long time. Standouts Kevin Gerry and Andrew Barrett are the two cornerstones on which the coaching staff hopes to build upon.

Despite back-to-back losses in the MAAC tournament, the 91 season proved to be successful for all those involved with the team.

Georg Montag wants to make his opponents think he's run out of gas — but wait, this is just the beginning of yet another goal by La Salle's leading scorer.

AN INABILITY TO FIND THE NET

PROVES FATAL FOR LADY EXPLORERS

Forward Nicole Mirano tries to free herself of enemy pursuit.

1991 proved to be a very long and at times frustrating season for women's soccer at La Salle University. Coming off a mediocre season which saw the departure of many seniors, the Explorers knew that they would have a young rebuilding team. The season started out with three losses to Stoney Brook, Villanova, and Adelphia. In each of these three games, the Lady Explorers were unable to find the net as they were shutout each time out. Confidence returned to the team on September 17th when they posted a shutout against Iona thus gaining their first win of the season.

During the course of the season, the team faced much adversity, but were able to successfully battle it every time. Team leadership came from Bridget Mclernan, a senior defenseman from Archbishop Ryan High School. As the lone member of the class of '92, Bridget had to handle the tough task of passing on the leadership and work ethics to a very young team. All told there were nine from the class of '95 who saw action this year. Freshmen Christine Raub, Moll McAvoy, Jennifer Pesillo, Colleen Schlussel, Kristanne Coppola, Lorie McCandless, Erin Able, Tiffany Carr and Erin Sykes round out the contingent of newcomers to the squad.

Despite the hard times, the team was not without its standout performers. Juniors Dawn Jaffee and Linda Madeja were two of the top scorers for the ladies this season. Together they accounted for nearly half of the team's offense. Steady play was also provided by Sue Guba and Denise Schleidell.

However as the season continued to evolve, the same problem was continually coming to the forefront: an inability to score. In their seventeen regular season games, the team was shutout ten times. One goal in any five of these ten games may have meant the difference between wins, ties and heart breaking losses. As the season came to its finale, the Lady Explorers had posted a record of 5-11-2. While unspectacular, the record did show that improvements could be made. If the young players are able to step up and play to their full abilities, the ladies soccer team should be a force to be reckoned with in the near future.

Despite season of ups and downs

'91 PROVES TO BE SUCCESSFUL

by Jennifer Miller & Jeannie Sgro

1982 was the last year that the La Salle Field Hockey team had a winning record, that is until the 1991 season. Through hard work and dedication the team compiled a record of 9-8-1 and just missed an invitation to a post season tournament.

The season started out slow, but under the guidance of Joan Broderick and Tracey Edwards who were filling in for head coach Tracey Greisbaum, the Explorers got on the right foot with a seven game winning streak. Key wins came against such teams as Drexel, St. Joseph's and Georgetown.

Throughout the course of the season, the offense was constantly being ignited by Kelli McGahey who with nine goals led the team in scoring. Furthermore, Pam Russo finished the season out with six scores. The majority of these points came on penalty strokes. Other scorers and offensive players on the Explorer squad include Amy Horsey, Gina Russo, Kerri McGahey, Juliee Zimmerman, Nicole Manente, Dawn Aufiero, Rachel Raffile, Renae Rutigliano, Maura Gaffney, Stephanie Irvine, Arlene Hetazzaela and Amanda Kropp.

On the other side of the playing field, the defense also played a major role in the team's successful season. A solid effort was put forth by everyone. Junior goalie Michelle Richmond had an exemplary year posting a 1.15 goals against average and six shutouts. Captain Jen Miller led the defense along with Kerri McGahey, Jen King, Kim Aglidian and Jeannie Sgro. Three bright spots in our future appear to be Jen Hoopes, Jen Porrino and Renae Rutigliano.

With a productive offense and a solid defense, La Salle's team has vastly improved during the course of the season and at the end could hold their heads up with a feeling of pride. Next season should hold the same as only four seniors are being lost to graduation. Best of luck to the 1992 Explorers Field Hockey Team!

City rivalries are competitive by nature and for Pam Russo and this St. Joseph's midfieldman show that this particular duel is no exception.

With a head of steam on her, Jen Hoopes doesn't seem to care that she is being trailed by two defenders.

The harriers have and contin- ıe to be a successful team bring- ng recognition and accolades to .a Salle athletics. During the our years spent by the two ;raduating seniors Roger Leis- ter and Chris Neglia, the team raced to two consecutive MAAC Conference Championships, a third place finish at the National Catholic Championship and competitive finishes at the National qualifying meet, the IC4As.

The female Cross Country team has gradually developed since seniors Sheila Regan and Christine Clark first donned the spiked shoes and La Salle jerseys. Undergoing three coaching changes, they have recently began to flourish under the ambitious coaching of Phyllis Keyes. In her second year at the helm, Coach Keyes has brought great improvements into the team. This past season the Lady Explorers led by Regan won the Collegiate Track Conference.

Both teams have also demonstrated exemplary academic performances as well. Several of the runners have been named to the all MAAC Cross Country Academic Team. In addition, most have been on or consistently maintaining Dean's List status.

The prospects for next year's team are exciting. A large majority of runners will be returning to both teams. Tom Schwind who has led the men's team in the past will most likely be returning. With Tom and several other exceptional runners the team will bring notoriety to the La Salle Cross Country program. An appearance at the National Cross Country Championships will not be surprising. The female harriers are also expected to blaze new strides of success in the upcoming years.

ON SERVICE FOR A SUCCESSFUL SEASON

by Craig Davis

As the winter weather subsides and the temperature rises, mother nature brings yet another tennis season. The 1992 edition looks to build upon some of the momentum that was established during the fall '91 campaign. In the fall the Explorers defeated a very strong St. Peter's team 6-3 and nearly upset former MAAC powerhouse Fordham barely losing 5-4.

On the positive side the team returns five of six starters from last season's successful spring season. At first singles is Senior Jeff Grasso, who has pulled off many big victories throughout his four year career. Junior Bill Browne, a steady second singles player, tandems with Grasso to pose a formidable number one doubles team. At third singles, is fierce competitor Matt Howley. Matt also leads the second doubles team with fourth singles player Dennis Christofor. The number five singles position will be up in the air with a handful of Freshmen vying for the spot. At number six is the captain of this year's team, Junior Craig Davis, who is usually dangerous for any opponent.

Second year coach George Mecherly feels that "The team's win/loss record won't indicate just how good we are, for we have a tougher schedule than any in recent memory." Besides the regular competition, there will be the inaugural Big 5 Tennis Challenge, which will provide a stern test for the Explorers.

A SMASHING SPRING

by Chris Keating

La Salle's Women's Tennis Team went through a season of rebuilding in 91-92. La Salle began their season by hiring Cheryl Kline to be their new coach. Kline, who was previously a high school coach in Quakertown, came in with a very enthusiastic attitude looking to create a strong team atmosphere and use the women's potential to its fullest.

But Coach Kline's job would not be easy, for she found herself with a very young team which included only two seniors, Captain Cindy Walden and Terry Creneti. The younger and stronger talent on the team included 1990 MAAC All-Academic Junior Elaine LaFlamme and Freshman Jeanne Montanna.

The team had their problems early on as it took three losses until they achieved what was probably their most exciting win of the season against Rider College. It was a tied match until the end of the day when sophomores Krista Hirschman and Memie Myers played to the pressure and won in the last set of third doubles. Although the Explorers finished with an overall record of three wins and 13 losses, wins such as these brought the best out in the women and showed the kind of strength and improvement that Kline had been looking for. Though their record may not have shown it, La Salle posted big wins against quality teams such as Rider, Rosemont and Philadelphia Textile.

As for the MAAC tournament, La Salle took eight participants along with them on the road. Those playing included Terry Creneti, Elaine LaFlamme, Jeanne Montanna, Ryoka Yamada, Kim Gibbons, Krista Hirschman and Memie Myers. Successful Explorers were Ryoka Yamada who made it to the semi-finals of singles and Terry Creneti and Yamada competed in a losing effort of the final round in second doubles.

This team accomplished quite a bit for being so young and seemed to accomplish all of Kline's goals of becoming a closer knit team and stronger as players and people. With their three wins and notable showing in the MAAC's, La Salle's women's tennis team can only look forward to a season of success in 92-93 and in the years to come.

La Salle University's Volleyball Team began the 1991 season looking to improve on their 1990 season record. Their final record for that season was 14-18. That record was good enough for a second place finish in the MAAC. 1990 saw head coach Arnie Rosenbaum graduating six seniors. This meant that his '91 squad would be young and inexperienced. However, he knew that the returning lettermen which he did have would act as a calming influence on his frosh newcomers.

Junior Lori Huggins and Eileen McKeough helped out Senior Jennifer Wutzer with the leadership factor. Once organized and fully prepared, the Lady Explorers were ready to begin their seasonal campaign.

Beginning on September 7th against Loyola, the team began a season which would see them compete thirty-nine times against such schools as Fordham, Columbia, Rutgers, Duke and Villanova. The competition throughout the season was stiff but nonetheless, the team was

As was mentioned previously, his team was composed mainly of freshmen. They were Connie Blades, Carrie Fossella, Kristin Reilly, Debra Garry, Debra Rosenbach and Mary Costigan. Six year coach Rosenbaum should feel confident about the success and future of his team. With all the young talent, it is easy to envision the volleyball being a force to be reckoned with in the not too distant future.

ON DRIVE FOR AN ABOVE PAR SEASON

by Chris McCool

The 1991-92 golf season began with high hopes for the La Salle Explorers. Led by Irishman Brian Shaw and seasonal superstar Sal Furia, the Explorers expected to improve on their solid 1990-91 record. The season opened on a high note with a second place finish at Franklin & Marshall and a solid showing at Georgetown. The fall season concluded with a somewhat disappointing 3rd place finish in the MAAC league championships. The championship was highlighted by all-MAAC performances by Sal Furia and freshman Mark Sheehan. In addition, senior captain Sean Carr earned All-Academic MAAC honors.

Besides Carr, Shaw and Sheehan, Explorer coach Brian Nelson will have the services of experienced senior Chris McCool. Returning this year are sophomores Paul Rambo and Chris Sivak and junior Fran "Eazy" McDonald. Notably absent from play this year was junior Marc Iatarola who sat out the season. Coach Nelson will be counting on Marc's leadership and assistance during the present season. It is hoped that together they will be able to hold up under pressure and perform well at the upcoming Eastern Regionals.

EXPLODING OFF THE MAT

by John Schmitt

Wrestling is one of the oldest forms of athletic competition known to mankind. This physically grueling sport combines personal sacrifice, discipline, concentration, motivation and brute strength into one complete package. However, wrestlers do not compete for the publicity or fanfare for there is none to be found in collegiate wrestling. Nor is there any common future to be sought. There is no pro career for these wrestlers once they graduate. Wrestlers compete solely for the enjoyment.

Not many people realize how demanding a match can be for one of our Explorers. For between seven and ten minutes a wrestler finds himself alone on the mat facing his opponent. During this time he must outthink his foe while being careful not to be physically overpowered. For this reason each match has its own signature.

The 1991-92 La Salle Wrestling team began its campaign against Swarthmore in early November. Subsequent matches pitted LSU against such schools as John Hopkins, St. John's and Seton Hall. The squad is led by Seniors Vinnie Ernst and Pat McGonagle. Supplement to the team came from Juniors Colin Dagle, Chris Shalbert and Jeff Benningoff. Newcomer Rich Rozier along with Kevin Crouthers provided some youth to this year's team. Under the guidance of head coach Ed Lawless, the Explorers hope to have another successful season in the ranks of collegiate wrestling.

EXPLORER BASKETBALL: "PRIDE, CONSISTENCY, DEFENSE WINS GAMES"

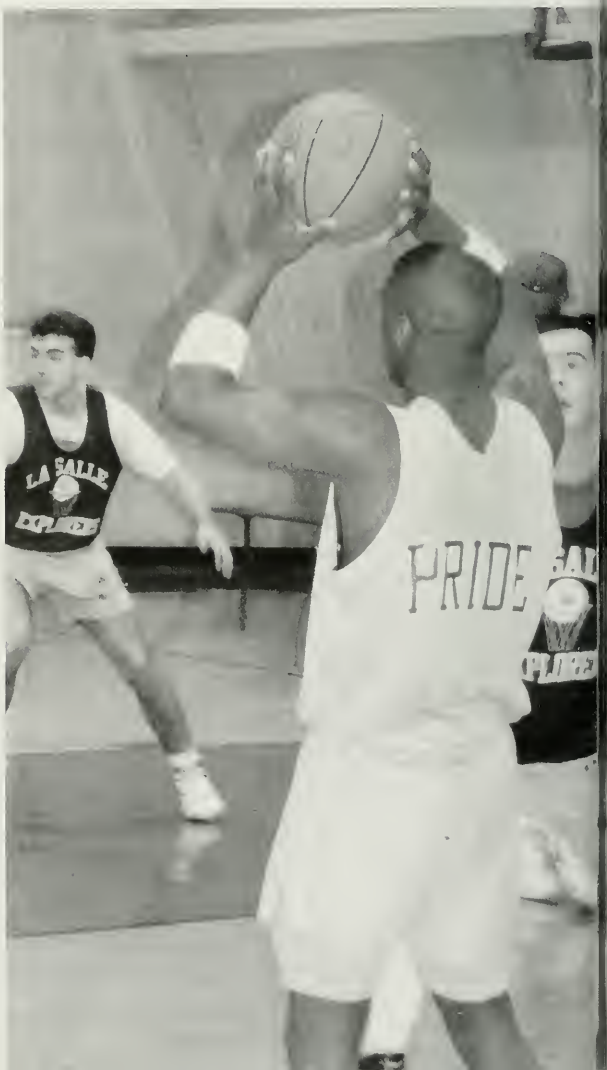
by John Schmitt

When La Salle defeated Niagara 84-78 at the Philadelphia Civic Center on January 12, 1991, the victory was the 100th in the school's history. The Explorers' official start of intercollegiate Varsity Basketball was the 1930-31 season, giving La Salle the distinction of being the team with the fewest number of seasons — 61 — to reach the grand total.

In the history of Varsity Basketball at La Salle University there have been a total of sixteen head coaches. For the past six seasons, the Explorers have been under the tutelage of the most recent of these men, Bill "Speedy" Morris. A native of Philadelphia, Coach Morris has been an integral part of the success that the Explorers have enjoyed at both the local and national levels.

As a graduate of Roman Catholic High School, Speedy began his coaching career at his Alma Mater in 1967. For fifteen years at Roman, Morris led the school to numerous championships. After two years at Penn Charter, he proceeded to take the helm of La Salle University Women's program. After two successful seasons, Coach Morris was chosen to take over for Dave "Lefty" Ervin as the head coach of the men's team. This marked the first Division I coach ever to make such a transition.

In his six years at La Salle,



Speedy has directed the Explorers to six post-season tournaments. Among these was a 1987 appearance in the finals of the N.I.T. and a first round victory in the 1990 N.C.A.A.'s against Southern Mississippi — the first N.C.A.A. tourney victory since 1983.

When he started at La Salle in 1986, Morris saw a successful program but also found a team which lost quite a few games which they should and could have won. Therefore in his first year Speedy's aim was to instill within his players an attitude that they could win if they believed in themselves.

To accomplish this, he had to begin building his program from the ground up through recruiting. In his tenure at La Salle, Morris has recruited players from all areas and all leagues. Among his finest and most treasured are Lionel Simmons, Randy Woods, Jack Hurd and Doug Overton.

Once he has the players in the program, Coach Morris and his assistants design individual programs for improving each individual's game. These are further integrated with practices to insure that his players learn the fundamentals of the game. Despite some recent changes in the style of collegiate basketball and some slight variations in his philosophy, Coach Morris has always held central the belief in defense and discipline.

When looking at his 1991-92 squad, Speedy freely acknowledges that this year's team has been plagued with inconsistent play. However with leadership from seniors Jack Hurd and Randy Woods, he fully expects the team to come together as the season reaches its most pivotal stretches.

Looking towards the future, Coach Morris expects the winning tradition to continue with freshmen Luteke Kalombo, Paul Burke and Blitz Wooten playing key roles. As for goals for himself and the program, Speedy sets only two. First — to maintain the level of pride that the program and the University have enjoyed for decades. Secondly, to be successful in their conference for "anything less than a M.A.A.C. Championship would be unacceptable."

When looking back at his years at La Salle, Speedy is proud of his conference championships but most of all for the players who have contributed to the history of La Salle University Basketball.

LAST CHANCE FOR EXPLORERS TO WIN M.A.A.C.

by Mike Bergin

The 1991-92 La Salle Explorers began their season on October 15th with an air of cautious optimism. Over the past three seasons, the Explorers won 80% of their games, compiling a remarkable record of 78 wins versus just 18 losses. Included in those three seasons were two trips to the NCAA tournament, a NIT tournament berth, a Big Five Title (and one co-title), and three MAAC championships. Of course, many of those wins were aided by superstars Lionel Simmons and Doug Overton, both now playing professional basketball. La Salle basketball was definitely back in the national spotlight and it was the responsibility of the class of 1992 to keep the proud tradition alive.

As had been the case in the Speedy Morris era, the Explorers faced a challenging non-conference schedule. They participated in the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic in Richmond, Virginia, where they soundly defeated the California Golden Bears before bowing to host Richmond Spiders in the championship game. Christmas break afforded the team the opportunity to play in the Far West Classic in Portland, Oregon, where they lost to the Oregon State Beavers and defeated the Oregon Ducks. The Explorers also tackled the likes of Princeton, Notre Dame, Bringham Young, and the Philadelphia Big Five in city series competition.

he season facing the usual high expectations of the Philadelphia Basketball faithful. The leadership void left by Overton's departure was assumed by senior captain Jack Hurd. After scoring well over one thousand points in his three previous campaigns, Hurd would be counted on for more leadership this season. Hurd came through with some impressive scoring and rebounding efforts in big games. Another key component would be senior Randy Woods who was coming off a tremendous junior year. Woods was sensational, scoring almost thirty points per game with his array of spectacular moves and long range shooting. Randy ranked among the nation's leaders in scoring and caught the eye of many professional scouts. Milko Lieverst and Bron Holland provided the squad with sound post play, often out-rebounding bigger opponents. Lieverst corralled almost ten rebounds a game while Holland's smooth post moves mystified opposing centers. Junior Jeff Neubauer provided steady play from the point guard position, benefiting from his daily battles with senior Keith Morris in practice. Morris, along with juniors Mike Bergin and Ray Schultz consistently pushed the starters in practice with their hustle and determination. The emergence of freshmen Luteke Kalombo, Paul Burke and Blitz Wooten provided the Explorers with great hope for the next three seasons.

The Explorers began the season in grand fashion, blowing out a very talented California team behind Randy Woods' 42 points. The next night against Richmond, the Explorers looked flat and fell behind by twelve points in a disappointing effort. These two games provided an interesting microcosm of the season, as the Explorers struggled to hit their stride. The team always played hard, providing the fans with much to cheer about. One of the most exciting games of the year was played on January 23rd at Temple's McGonigle Hall. The Explorers fell behind by twenty-two points, embarrassing themselves in front of a national television audience on ESPN. The team caught fire and mounted a comeback, defeating the Owls by an eleven point margin. Another win occurred in early December with the Explorers defeating Villanova at the Spectrum in a Big Five doubleheader. These wins were mixed in with disappointing losses to Notre Dame and Pennsylvania in which the team struggled in the second half. All in all, the 1991-92 men's basketball team displayed great heart and successfully carried on La Salle's proud basketball tradition.

SUCCESSFUL WIN-LOSS RECORD

by John Schmitt

1990-91 was another challenging season for John Miller's Explorers, but more importantly it was a winning season. La Salle battled through a multitude of setbacks to finish with an overall record of 16-12 and a fourth place finish in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference.

For Coach Miller, this was his fifth straight winning season. "I thought we had a tremendous season," said Miller. "It was a crazy year with all the sickness, injuries and adversity that we had to face, but we came together and that's what it is all about."

To say that 1990-91 was a year plagued by injuries would be a slight understatement. The continual list of accidents included a series of bone spurs, chin stitches and stress fractures. All told a total of 72 games were missed by nine different players.

However, that was last year and all those setbacks have been put into the history books. Of that team only two players were lost: starters Mary Greybush and Denise Kayajian. Between them they averaged thirty-two points per game. Their loss would most certainly be felt but with the talent that this team was returning the transition would and could be made smoothly. Led by senior Mimi Harris, La Salle's all-time leader in assists, the Explorers were returning three starters and five additional lettermen.

During the course of the season, John Miller began to see some of the young talent that this team possessed. Sophomore Jennifer Cole who averaged 15 points per game as a freshman last season was joined by newcomers Allyson Blue and Cindy Pierce. Together these freshmen form the backbone of the future for La Salle Women's Basketball. Sophomores Lisa Auman, Lori Hamilton and Mary Heller rounded out the corps of youngsters.

As a result of the hard work put forth by the team, the Lady Explorers have been able to accrue the same total of victories which they had last year with more than a month remaining in the season. With the emotional boost provided by their quick start, the Explorers and John Miller hope that their future will be filled with post seasonal tournament play.

Coach John Miller utilizes a time-out to discuss strategy with his team.

Hard Work, Numerous practices all key in Cheerleaders

by John Schmitt

The cheerleading squad for La Salle University is an extremely important part of the basis for school and community spirit. It is very common for you to see them at all of the Explorers' home basketball games at the Civic Center. The cheerleaders also travel with the team occasionally to provide that extra added edge.

Being a member of this special group is not an easy task: Coach Carl Smith has the group practicing quite frequently. Included in this package is a summer camp for the team and the annual performance at Open House Festivities. This year's team is led by Captain Leo Hegarty. With this, the squad is able to provide our fans the excitement that should accompany all basketball games.

Complementing the skills and ıctions of the cheerleaders is La Salle University's Dance Team. WOMEN'S TEAM IN SEARCH OF AQUATIC GLORY

by John Schmitt

The Lady Explorers' swim team finished the 1991-92 season with an impressive record of nine wins and just one loss. In addition to their impressive regular season record, the Lady Explorers also finished second at the Catholic Nationals. Their success this season was once again testified to with a first place victory at the MAAC championships in late February.

This year's team is captained by Seniors Cindy Meehan and Michelle Grace. The rest of the team is rounded out by Nicole Ianerelli, Pam Wilson, Stacy Schroll, Laveu MacPherson, Chris DeMark, Angela Carter, Holly Barnett, Judy Skoronski, Karen Hafner, Deidre Lynch, Beth Choncelor, Kim Pharrer, Heather McPherson, Joanne Brown, Liz Schaffer, Kathy Oacky and Cheryl Coppola.

Once again this year's team is under the guidance of Malachi Cunningham. Under him, this year's team has went on to break many school records. The first of these was the 400 medley relay by the team of Deidre Lynch, Karen Hafner, Cindy Meehan and Michelle Grace. This is only one of five records that the Lady Explorers have shattered this year. With this kind of team behind them, there is no reason not to expect LSU swimming to be a dominant force for years to come.

THE INSIDE TRACK

Experienced coaching staff, veteran upperclassmen and talented newcomers insure La Salle staying on

by Roger Leister

When you first took a look at La Salle's campus brochure, you probably saw a photo of a serene, sunny, warm day with a runner or two jogging comfortably in the background. This is normal. Now, picture a runner or two indoors speeding like mad around a pint-sized track: their every muscle straining, their faces turning a funny shade of blue, and their eyes cast skyward (toward the ceiling anyway) praying that they don't see their lunch a second time. This is not normal, yet it goes on regularly in the sport known as indoor track — running's answer to arena football.

The 1992 edition of La Salle indoor track added quality and quantity to a team that has steadily grown in stature since head coach Jim Gulick's arrival four years ago. Over thirty runners competed, with tutelage from three wise men — Irv "Moon" Mondshein, George "Bear" Williams and Coach Gulick — who bring a combined 90 years of track and field coaching experience to La Salle.

Instead of a win-loss record, the team is represented by individuals who shoot for qualifying times in their respective events. Reaching those standards earns them a trip to the IC4A and/or NCAA post-season championship meets.

The '92 team stressed quality on the track, and broke down into three categories: 1) sprinters, 2) middle distance and 3) distance. For the novice fan, that's: 1) really fast guys, 2) guys who run pretty fast and just enough to keep their sanity and 3) guys who simply run too much.

The impact of newcomers to the team was felt throughout the season. Distancemen Mike Ewing, Tom Tennant and Jason DiJoseph — talented transfers from William & Mary, Navy and Wisconsin — found the atmosphere at 20th & Olney to their liking and they proved it on the track with superb showings in the mile and the half-mile.

An army of freshmen included sprinters Greg Mills, Joe Crowne and Kevin Minihan: middle distance men Pete Dougherty and Dave Patten: distance runners Marcelo Casadei, Kevin Davis and Matt Stull as well as triple jumper Neil Salvage.

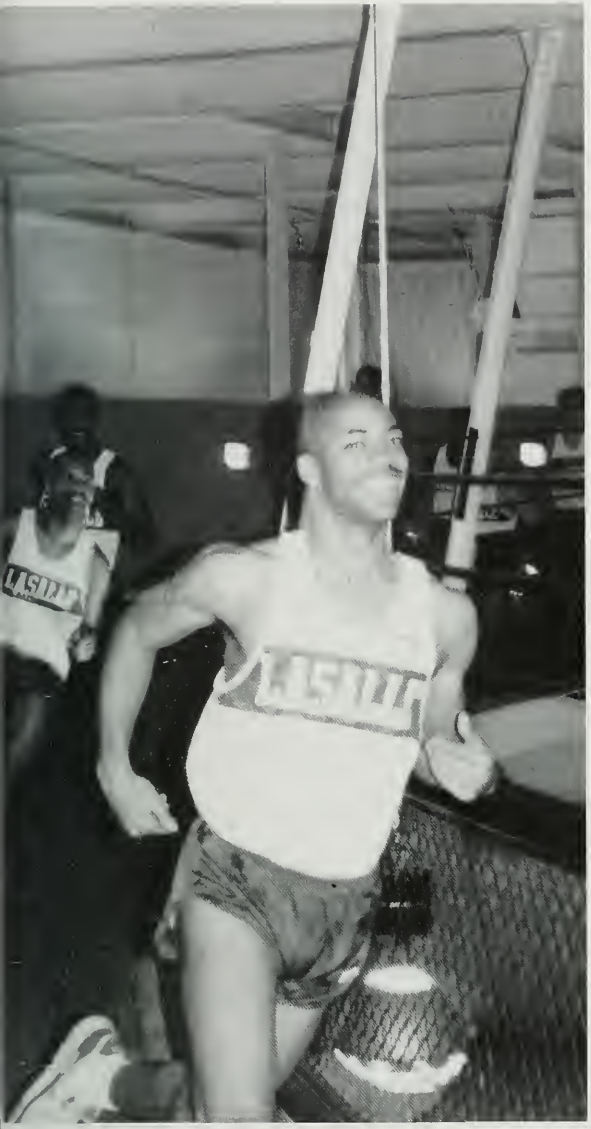
The newcomers added a depth that was much needed due to injuries. Various ailments forced J.J. Hunter (La Salle's fastest human), IC4A veteran Fran Hoey and endurance specialist Zep Greto to miss the indoor season.

The sprinting corps was led by the IC4A qualifiers of the 4x400 meter relay — Juniors Mark McCall and Eric Mobley, freshman Chuck Kelly, and sophomore Ed Kelleher, who has emerged as the team's finest hurdler. Dasher-jumper-hurdler Derek Brown rounds out the speed merchants who spent many an afternoon tearing up Hayman Hall's ceiling track, a.k.a. "The House of Pain."

Middle distancemen run mainly the 800, 1000, 1500 meter runs. It's at these distances that runners begin to wilt and pacing becomes important. Tired old proverbs like No Pain, No Gain might apply but the Explorers prefer a different motto for psyching themselves up: Oxygen? Who needs it? This group consisted of IC4A regula Chris Donato and Dave Smith plus sophomores Joe Cranstor and Rob Forberger.

Distance runners take the "in door" out of indoor track. Dur ing the frigid winter season, they go inside only to sleep or to rur their 3000 or 5000 meter races Their practice grounds have nc boundaries, but they try to dc most of their mileage in the 21 area code. Seniors Tom Schwinc (IC4A vet.) Chris Neglia anc Roger Leister as well as Junio Matt Turner all admit to doing this stuff. Incidentally, they dc a pretty good job in races, neve letting a St. Joe's runner cros the finish line before them.

The 1992 team was a deep anc talented group that loses only Brown, Leister and Neglia tc graduation. Look for school re cords to fall in '93, as La Sall track continues its emergence ir the East.



Overcoming injuries and setbacks provides confidence for Lady's Indoor Track

by Jennifer Quigley

Though the La Salle girls' indoor track team did not have an overly successful season last year, this year's group of athletes has not allowed this to affect them. As a member of this team, I can say that I have never witnessed more dedication and desire from a team wishing to make a comeback. One might ask, "How can you run, isn't it boring?" Well, this group of girls is anything but that.

Last year five injuries and two illnesses left a large gap between winning and losing. Last outdoor season the 4x800m relay team finally qualified for the ECAC's (Eastern Coast Athletic Conference), which was held down at George Mason University. Soon another obstacle presented itself: A sudden rash of injuries at the end of last year and the beginning of this year. Despite these difficult times, all members of our team have returned with high hopes for breaking the barrier of achieving an ECAC qualifying time.

The pieces are now in place and the coaches now have a renewed confidence in what the team can do as a whole. Senior Sheila Regan, the team captain, had a setback in her collegiate running career when she badly sprained her ankle on a distance run last fall. However she is now back with the team and having a superior season constantly making progress. With respect to other team members, all are running faster and more competitively against each of the more talented schools. This enthusiastic mood is reflected well in coach Phyllis Keyes' comments: "This year we are much healthier and stronger coming off the cross-country season. For the indoor season to be a success, we have to continue to work on speed and combining that with the endurance from the cross-country season."

Since the beginning of the year Cheryl has tried to instill and build up a confidence which will hopefully act as a spark plug against future competition. Even the team sees differences in the way we are approaching competitions. Sophomore Lynesia Crawford said, "I have gotten in shape faster than last year mainly because of experience and the way the coaching staff relates to each of us on an individual basis."

La Salle University has recently shifted from the MAAC (Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference) to the MCC (Midwestern Collegiate Conference). This change will be implanted next year and will be a challenge for everyone. Many freshmen acknowledge that this might add another year on to their acclimation process into collegiate running.

Among this season's highlights is that the girls' 4x800m relay team qualified for the ECAC's which will be held at Syracuse University. The relay consists of Jennifer Quigley, Theresa Lewandowski, Laura Black and Sheila Regan. The team middle distance runners are Laura Black (Freshman), Joyce Jellig, Jennifer Quigley, Theresa Lewandowski, Jennifer Gatt and Sheila Regan. Distance runners are Melanie Johnson (Jr.), Andrea Dotsey (Jr.) and Christine Clark (Senior). Sprinters include Dana Boger (Frosh), Lynesia Crawford (Soph.), Lisa Hartley (Soph.) and Angela Fitch (Soph.).

People now look at the LaSalle girls' track team and wonder. The team has become respected among their fellow competitors. The team has been slowly building up a name for ourselves, a name which stands for working hard and starting at the bottom and working our way towards the top. Because of this we are able to hold our heads up high knowing that we have overcome many obstacles as a team and have persevered throughout it all.

We must continue this winning attitude by remembering that when the coaches keep saying, "Keep driving, pump your arms all the way through that finish line!", they are simply trying to breed within us the competitive edge needed to be a champion. The aroma of victory is in the air and the LaSalle girls' track team has been so close to victory at times. It is now up to us to take this momentum to the next level and achieve all that we know that we can.

Rowing Success

by Patricia Russonello

CREW — is not easily defined. It is only for the dedicated athlete. Rowing is more than just a sport — it is teamwork, beyond everything. When you join the crew team you become part of a new family, closer to you than anyone else. You need them, they are part of you, for in the boat are many individuals working together as one. The more you experience it, the more you need it. It's something, a feeling that burns from within, which causes apparently sane individuals to do things that others would consider less than sane. It is said that the rower does more before 8 a.m. than most people do all day. It is a great deal of work, that gets little recognition.

Rowers range from lifetime athletes to never before athletes, but after a few weeks, no one can tell them apart. They know inside that they must work together in order to succeed. A rower does more than pull on an oar, a rower is a runner, a weightlifter, and above all a determined athlete.

The team that considers Schuykill River their second home cannot forget ... the erg ... textile runs ... circuits ... lifting ... the loop ... art museum steps ... making weight ... hills ... jumpies (enough said?) ... spring break (what spring break?) ... seat racing ... cut the cake drill ... wake up calls (thanks guys!) ... fast hands, slow slide, quick catch ... pick drill ... square blades ... van rides ... 5:00 a.m ... Coleman ... the sneaker ball ... van conversations ... boathouse row ... the angels ... 500 meters to go! ... the island ... Etes-Vous-Prets-Partez! ... "I can't, I have crew" ... the addiction ... fun ... and friends!

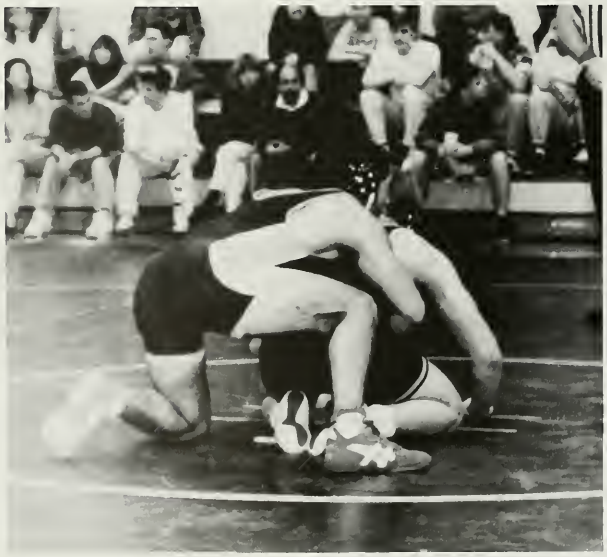
Crew is a varsity sport which has no recruiting, gives no scholarships, and has no "star" of the team. It's a close-knit group whose season begins the second week of September and ends after spring finals. La Salle's team had a great turnout this year for the novice women, 24 in all, with varsity women adding 14 more to that with returning seniors, and they are: Dorothy Soliwada, Karen Heavey, and Eileen Timothy. The women's team is strong, and is getting stronger than it's been in years. The team is currently under the direction of head coach Julie Yentz. In addition, Greg Doyle is in his first season as the new novice coach. The team will end the fall season with the Frostbite and Braxton Regattas. These regattas involve local competition and will give the rowers a look at their competitors. River practice is soon put on hold during the winter season. At this point land training begins and continues throughout until early spring. Spring will include traveling to various rivers racing against some difficult teams.

All of the hard work and dedication throughout the season eventually leads to the national collegiate competition known as the Dad Vail Regatta, where more than 100 crews from across the country come in search of the top prize. Hopefully La Salle will come home with top honors. The 1991-92 season looks to be a promising year for the Explorers' Women Crew Team.

Editor's Note: We apologize but due to circumstances beyond our control, no pictures were available for the Men's Crew Team. We are truly sorry for this discrepancy.

La Salle University would like to take this chance to thank all of our athletes who exemplify the ideal

DON'T DREAM IT — BE IT



For all our graduating athletes:

Your leadership, dedication and enthusiasm is what allows La Salle's program to flourish as it does. Please continue to use the work ethics which have gotten you where you are today.

Don't Dream It Be It!

I can clearly recall my first day at La Salle: a rainy Sunday morning on the first weekend of September. Besides the less than stellar weather, I also remember being nervous. A million questions raced through my mind: Can I handle the college workload? What are the people like? How am I going to make friends?

Four years later, I think about that Sunday and wonder why I was so nervous. Looking back, my fears were silly. I obviously handled the academic workload or I wouldn't be graduating. Just as important as Graduation was the path I took to get there, the close friends I've made at La Salle and the different types of people that I've met here. The diversity among students has enabled me to experience opinions and ideas different from my own. My acceptance and consideration of these ideas has undoubtedly aided my growth into a more mature person.

Because of the people of La Salle, I am no longer the apprehensive eighteen year old; rather, I am a confident, polished adult who will receive his degree in May.

About two million Iraqi Kurds and other minorities fled north in April 1991 when Kurdish rebels in the north and Shiite Muslim rebels in the south failed to oust President Saddam Hussein in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf War. At least 6,700 of the Iraqi refugees died fleeing to the Turkish border.

Military units from the United States and at least seven other countries participated in a relief effort along with civilian agencies from about 20 countries. The relatively quick, cooperative response helped keep the death rate as low as it was.

"There were U.S. soldiers, Dutch nurses and Red Cross workers working side by side. There was very little friction," Dr. Michael J. Toole of the CDC's International Health Program Office said. "It really was an unprecedented effort."

Firefighters were unprepared for the sight they were met with in Kuwait — scores of oil wells sending plumes of red and orange flames 30 yards into the air. Oil lakes and soot blackened the sand.

During the seven-month Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, more than 730 oil wells were damaged or set ablaze. Firefighting crews have been able to extinguish 584 wells since the effort began in March 1991.

When the effort to combat the blazes began in March, it took an average of four days to put out one well fire. Now the teams are averaging 8.5 wells each day, according to Oil Minister Hamous al-Rquba.

The faster rate of progress has been attributed to the increase in the number of firefighting companies, the availability of needed equipment, the completion of the water system and the growing experience of the firefighters.

Teams from the United States, Canada, China, Iran, Kuwait, Hungary and France are all working together to clean up this environmental disaster.

Desert Storm Commander General H. Norman Schwarzkopf gave a thumbs up to the crowd as he made his way up Broadway during New York's Operation Welcome Home ticker tape parade in June 1991. A fireworks extravaganza capped off the celebration.

Schwarzkopf, General Colin Powell and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney were the grand marshals of the New York parade, with over 600,000 people turning out to welcome the soldiers home. More than one million people attended a welcome home parade May 19 in Hollywood, and an estimated 800,000 turned out for the parade in Washington.

"U.S.A.! U.S.A.!" the flag-waving crowd chanted during a half-hour of nighttime fireworks over the East River in New York City. The $1 million display was accompanied by the New York Pops Orchestra. A teary-eyed Korean War veteran said, "These young boys put their lives on the line and now they're getting their reward."

JUDGMENT and FATE

Ronald Reagan threw open the doors of his presidential library on November 5, 1991, and invited the public to judge his turn in the White House.

A military band played "Hail to the Chief" and the crowd of 4,200 invited guests cheered as President Bush and former Presidents Carter, Nixon and Ford joined Reagan in the first gathering ever of five past or current presidents.

Each president took a turn at the microphone, praising Reagan and reflecting on their own presidential challenges.

"The doors of this library are open now and all are welcome," Reagan said. "The judgment of history is left to you, the people."

Leaders of the world's seven largest industrial democracies began arriving in London on July 14, 1991, for the July 15-17 economic summit focusing on aid for the Soviet Union.

Mikhail Gorbachev made a two-hour presentation to the leaders of the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy and Japan that closely followed the 23-page letter he had sent to each of them the week before.

By the close of the summit, the Group of Seven had offered Gorbachev technical assistance, and a special association with the International Monetary Fund but not the enormous economic aid he had sought.

Although financial aid was not forthcoming, Ljubo Sirc, director of the Center for Research into Communist Economies, said, "The very fact that this meeting has taken place has improved the chances for the Soviet Union to attract investment."

"It always makes a difference when the powers that be in Western countries become interested in the fate of a country with which trade is possible. Businessmen become aware of the possibilities."

A sealed structure of steel and glass will be "home" for two years to four men and four women. The structure, called Biosphere 2, is about the size of 2 ½ football fields and contains all necessities of life. For two years, nothing will be introduced from the outside.

In addition to eight humans, Biosphere 2 houses 3,800 species of animals and plants and five ecosystems.

This $100 million project has taken seven years to put together and hopes to be the model for other self-sufficient environments. Planets other than Earth (Biosphere 1) may one day be the base for similar structures.

Much skepticism has been expressed by the scientific community, however. Many scientists seem to feel this experiment is a ridiculous sham, designed to draw spectators who will spend around $10 just to view the sphere and spend even more in the gift shop.

Both participants and backers of the Biosphere 2 maintain that the project will provide significant data.

On July 11, 1991, the moon slipped over the sun in the celestial ceremony of the eclipse, turning day into night for thousands of viewers and scientists.

About 500 astronomers and tens of thousands of tourists came to see the moon line up between the sun and Earth and plunge into darkness a 160mile-wide swath stretching from Hawaii to Mexico's Baja Peninsula, central and southern Mexico, Central America, Colombia and Brazil.

One after another, spectators around the mountaintop astronomy observatory in Hawaii exclaimed, "Oh, my God!" as the sky went dark. This was the first time an eclipse path of totality passed over a major observatory, scientists said.

The brush fire that killed 19 people in Oakland, CA, was the costliest blaze in U.S. history — the damage was put at more than $5 billion. This surpasses the Great Chicago Fire of 1871.

Pushed by 25 mph winds across brush that had been dried by five years of drought, the October 1991 blaze destroyed more than 1,800 houses and 900 apartments, city officials said.

The wooded area, with its postcard views of San Francisco Bay, was a disaster waiting to happen because of the drought, officials said. Many of the area's once-elegant homes were reduced to rubble, their bare chimneys looming like giant tombstones.

Forestry Department spokeswoman Karen Terrill said, "The very thing that makes the wildlands attractive and romantic, like the trees, is what makes the wildlands deadly."

TRIUMPH and

After all the twists, turns and tension, the closest of World Series ended in the closest of games.

The Minnesota Twins and Jack Morris squeezed past the Atlanta Braves 1-0 on pinch-hitter Gene Larkin's single in the bottom of the 10th inning on October 27, 1991, to win Game 7 and end baseball's most dramatic odyssey.

Never before had three Series games gone into extra innings, and the Braves and Twins saved the best for last, matching zero for zero, pressure pitch for pitch, even turning back bases-loaded threats in the same inning.

"Someone had to go home a loser, but there's no loser in my mind," Morris said. "Those are two of the greatest teams. I just didn't want to quit. Somehow, we found a way to win this thing."

TRAGEDY

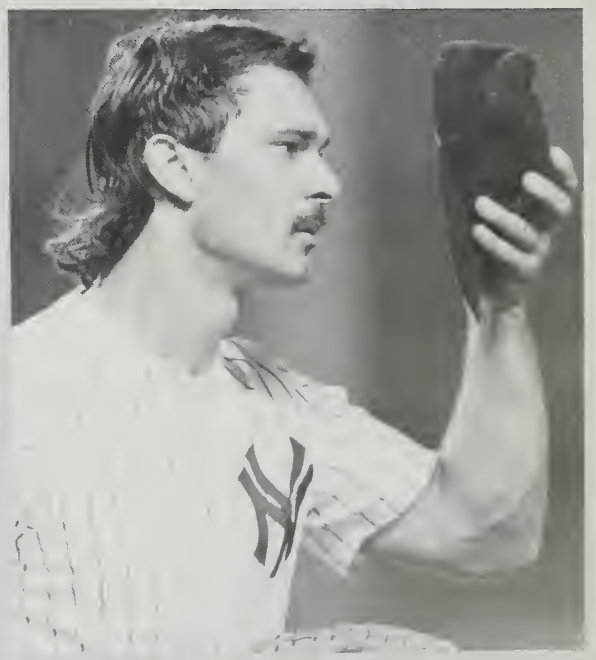
Magic Johnson, whose beaming smile and sparkling play entertained basketball fans for more than a decade, announced on November 7, 1991, that he had tested positive for the AIDS virus and was retiring.

"Because of the HIV virus I have attained, I will have to announce my retirement from the Lakers today," Johnson told reporters at the Forum, where he played for 12 superstar seasons with the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I plan on going on, living for a long time," he said. Johnson said he would become an AIDS activist and campaign for safe sex.

More than just a basketball star who led the Lakers to five NBA championships, Johnson has been a philanthropist, a prominent corporate spokesman and a role model for young people. His broad grin, familiar nickname and electrifying ability have made him familiar to people around the world.

"I'm going to go on, I'm going to beat it and I'm going to have fun," he insisted, displaying some of the irrepressible zest for life that he brought daily to the basketball court.



Don Mattingly received national attention in August, 1991, for more than his baseball expertise. A flat refusal to get a haircut resulted in his being benched just before the New York Yankees' game against Kansas City.

The hair-raising issue came to a close just days later when bullpen catcher Carl Taylor gave Mattingly a trim.

The haircut took 30 minutes and Taylor took a little off the back, where Mattingly's brown locks curled on his collar.

"I was pretty much embarrassed by the whole thing. I've never been the kind of player who's been a problem," Mattingly said. "We've disagreed on things in the past, but they've never taken the game away from me."

Thurgood Marshall, the first African-American member of the Supreme Court, was less than a week shy of his 83rd birthday when he announced on June 27, 1991, that he was retiring. His 24 years on the bench followed 23 of fighting before that court and others for the rights of the oppressed and forgotten.

He won 29 of the 32 cases he argued before the Supreme Court while he was head of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and, later, while he was the federal government's solicitor general. No victory was sweeter, or more earthshaking, than his 1954 coup in Brown vs. Board of Education when the court ruled that racially segregated schools were unconstitutional.

Life has not been the same for law professor Anita Hill since going public with allegations that Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas sexually harassed her nearly a decade ago.

Although Thomas was confirmed, professor Hill insisted that by letting her story be known she had accomplished everything she set out to do. "All that's happened has made the general public much more aware of sexual harassment than ever before," said Hill.

She offered one piece of advice to victims of sexual harassment. "Try to find somebody you can trust and tell them," she said. "Try to find somebody who can help make you feel that you are not at fault. Find someone you can trust because you can't take it all out on yourself, you can't internalize it."

SUPREME CONTROVERSY

Forty-three year old Clarence Thomas grew up poor, Black and Democratic in Pinpoint, Georgia, but later switched parties and became a controversial symbol of Black conservatism.

"Only in America," Thomas said after President Bush announced his nomination as the second Black justice on the Supreme Court. Thomas will succeed Thurgood Marshall who has retired.

In addition to the controversy of Thomas's legal views, a charge of sexual harassment was brought against him by law professor Anita Hill. Thomas vehemently denied the allegations and said, "This is Kafkaesque. Enough is enough."

After much debate over who was right and who was wrong — Clarence Thomas, Anita Hill, the system itself — the United States Senate voted to confirm him.

On October 18, 1991, Clarence Thomas became the 106th United States Supreme Court Justice.

President F.W. de Klerk, African National Congress president Nelson Mandela and Zulu Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi came together in September 1991 when black and white leaders gathered to sign a peace pact in a bid to end faction fighting that has claimed hundreds of lives in South Africa.

The accord, which created groups to investigate violent acts by police and citizens, marked the first joint agreement between the government and the two main black movements.

It was also seen as an important test of whether the main political groups can work together for reforms to end white-minority rule.

Arabs and Israelis left Madrid, Spain with mixed feelings of frustration and anticipation after an intense foray into the realm of peace. Israel and Syria were mired in recriminations, but promised to meet again.

The talks smashed a 43-year taboo on direct Israeli-Arab talks, setting in motion a process of face-to-face negotiations to resolve one of the most intractable regional conflicts in the world.

The United States and Soviet Union sponsored the November talks, and President Bush's assessment was: "We have a long way to go and interruptions will probably occur, but hopes are bright."

Both Croatia and Slovenia proclaimed independence on June 25, and within 24 hours, military tanks were rolling toward border crossings and airports, attempting to secure the country. The trade of artillery fire began.

Strong ethnic and political divisions have existed in the country for centuries, but the peaceful co-existence that has been maintained in the region for decades has splintered.

More than 5,000 people have been killed since civil war began in Yugoslavia, and the count is still rising.

I was not thinking of the La Salle community or of my education or even of graduation on the day I moved into the residence halls (the politically correct term for dorms). I was, however, thinking — Rain, rain, go away, Let me get my stuff in OK. (For the commuters, there was a thunderstorm on the day we freshman residents arrived. At that time, every resident wished they had chosen to be a commuter.) Even though it took days for everything to dry, we survived — just as all commuters survive the daily battle for a parking space somewhere within La Salle's zip code. Somehow, we overcame these little trials and became La Salle Students.

La Salle became a part of who we are. When meeting new people who inquired about us someplace between our name and our favorite "Simpsons" episode, the phrase student at La Salle came up. And, after the obligatory comment about the Basketball team, they walked away knowing something about us. In conversation with others they might later say, "Oh yeah, I met someone from La Salle yesterday." As we graduate the name will continue to mark us as unique, as individuals who are part of a tradition much larger than ourselves.

The reputation of this University will follow us throughout our lives and our lives will inevitably reflect La Salle. There will never be a more meaningful time than these four years. Change, growth, and personal identity marked well this time at college. For more than academics or extracurricular activities we take ourselves out into the world with the confidence which comes from having earned the title of La Salle Graduate.

As freshmen we knew nothing; as sophomores we knew everything. By the time we were juniors we relaxed about what we knew and didn't know so that we could simply enjoy ourselves. Now that we are seniors we appreciate college realizing the value of these years in a way that can only be known by those who know they must soon say goodbye to something cherished. So as we don our Caps and Gowns and pick up our Diploma, let us remember the friends we've made, the fun we've had, and the education we've received. After leaving here each time it rains or when a parking place cannot be found, I know I will think of La Salle University and the part it has played in my life. What will you think of?

One OUTSTANDING Graduate . . .

At the close of the 1992 Commencement Exercises, there was one more distinguished graduate than usual among the Class of 1992. After three decades of service to the La Salle community, Brother Patrick is leaving our University to accept his appointment as president of Catholic University.

In the last thirty years, Brother Patrick has witnessed a series of graduations at La Salle. He initially joined La Salle in 1960 as an associate professor in the English Department. After a two-year term as principal of La Salle High School in Miami, Florida, he returned to La Salle College in 1964 to head the College Honors Program. The following year, his dedication to teaching excellence garnered him the Lindback Foundation Award. In 1969, Brother Patrick was appointed Director of Development, and by January of 1977, he had graduated to the College presidency.

Ironically, upon accepting office, Brother Patrick announced his intention to carry out a "relatively external presidency." However, as the past fifteen years attest, his role has extended far beyond mere diplomacy, and his leadership in promoting the evolution of La Salle College into La Salle University has proven successful in improving La Salle from the inside out. During his tenure, the map of La Salle has been literally and radically redrawn. He spurred the expansion of La Salle's main campus, from the construction of Connelly Library, to the erection of much needed student housing complexes such as St. Neumann Hall and St. Miguel Townhouses, to the installation of an outdoor track, and to the dramatic conversion of the Union Cafeteria into the Union Food Court. Academically, La Salle has also prospered through the expansion of both undergraduate and graduate programs, which ultimately earned La Salle university status.

Undoubtedly, Brother Patrick's tenure has not been without its setbacks. He has struggled through the same problems that have plagued past presidents, such as declining student enrollment and the ever-unpopular yet inevitable tuition increases that are the price of a high quality education. His success lies not in solving such problems, but in overcoming them enough to maintain the high standards of a La Salle education. Through his guidance, the La Salle community has learned to value and celebrate its unity, yet remain open to diversity, not only on campus, but also outside the collegiate sphere. In light of all of his contributions to the La Salle community, we express our gratitude and congratulations to Brother Patrick, and hope that his devotion, enthusiasm, and talent will meet the same appreciation in his new presidency.

The Right Time

Paul Simon is still singing after all these years.

On August 15, 1991, Simon and a 17-piece band drawn from five nations stepped on stage in Central Park for a free concert lasting almost three hours. Erstwhile partner Art Garfunkel was not, however, by his side.

The concert was a retrospective of Simon's career, from the simple beginnings of low-budget doo-wap of the '50's in Queens, NY to the pulsating South African sounds and rhythms of his 1986 "Graceland" album and the Afro-Brazilian drumming and Antonio Carlos Jobim chord chemistry of his latest, "The Rhythm of the Saints."

Most of Simon's work is a complex mixture of music from the United States and other lands — Jamaican reggae, Louisiana zydeco, gospel, jazz, rock, English pastoral, the Blues and African chants.

The Central Park concert, attended by over 500,000 fans, is part of a longer trip, a pause in his "Born at the Right Time" tour of almost 14 months that he says will end early next year in Africa after stops in Japan, China, Australia and South America.

On September 14, 1991, Carolyn Suzanne Sapp from Honolulu, Hawaii, shed tears of joy as she was crowned Miss America. Within days, however, her experience of physical abuse became public knowledge.

In 1990, Sapp sought a restraining order against her then-boyfriend, professional football player Nuu Faaola, for alleged physical violence.

Both Sapp and Faaola were disappointed that their previous problems had been publicized. Sapp stated, "That incident . . . was personal then and it remains personal now."

Carolyn Suzanne Sapp has put the trauma behind her and gone forward with strength and courage to win the Miss America crown.

Sapp has selected the issue of parental responsibility as the social issue she will focus on during her reign.

Freedom has come

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and his family were placed under house arrest in the Crimea on August 19, 1991, as an eight-man emergency committee led by Vice President Gennady Yanayev took power in a coup attempt in the Soviet Union.

Crowds of perplexed people wandered among the many Soviet tanks parked behind the Red Square during the military coup hours.

Convoys of Soviet tanks moved into Moscow, less than two miles from the Kremlin. The Communist hard-liners who ousted Gorbachev sent the army's tanks rolling within a mile of the Russian Parliament building where Russian President Boris Yeltsin was staying.

Yeltsin called on Russians to resist the takeover, and resist they did. Constructing a protective human wall around Yeltsin's headquarters, his supporters demanded Gorbachev's return.

As a former Gorbachev adviser spoke to the crowds, denouncing the coup and demanding that Gorbachev be allowed to address the Soviet people, hands were raised in applause.

On Wednesday, as the Communist Party denounced the takeover, Yanayev and the other coup leaders fled Moscow. Latvia and Estonia declared immediate independence from the Soviet Union.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin waved the white-blue-and-red Russian tricolor flag from the Russian Federation building before a crowd of about 100,000 jubilant supporters celebrating the end of the three-day coup attempt. Body guards held bullet-proof shields in front of him.

Before dawn on Thursday, August 22, an Aeroflat jet arrived at Vnukovo Airport, Moscow, bringing home Gorbachev and his entourage.

The coup had failed, and before the day was through, all coup leaders were arrested except for Interior Minister Boris Pugo, who reportedly killed himself.

In addition to telephone service being cut to all KGB buildings and Gorbachev naming a new chief of the KGB, the statue of the founder of the KGB was toppled while thousands of Muscovites watched.

TOP 10 REASONS I WENT TO LA SALLE UNIVERSITY
1. MY PARENTS WOULD HAVE DONE ANYTHING TO GET ME OUT OF THE HOUSE.
2. IT'S A GREAT EDUCATION AT TWICE THE PRICE.
WANTED TO ATTEND A SCHOOL WITH AN NCAA TOURNAMENT BASKETBALL TEAM.
THE ILLUMINATING OFF-CAMPUS CULTURE SIMPLY THRILLS ME.
HAD NO DESIRE TO ATTEND AN IVY LEAGUE SCHOOL.
THE EASY ACCESS TO ATLANTIC CITY HELPS ME PAY FOR MY EDUCATION.
7. PHILADELPHIA IS A BUDDING METROPOLIS WITH A VAST VARIETY OF CULTURAL ACTIVITIES.
8. MY CATHOLIC GRANDPARENTS GAVE ME THE APPLICATION FOR CHRISTMAS.
9. THOUGHT I WAS APPLYING TO LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY
10. THE LIMITED ALCOHOL AVAILABILITY ALLOWS FOR MAXIMUM STUDY TIME.

From The Desk of The Editor:

Well guys, it is over. We have met the final deadline and never again have to figure out if the copy is going to fit in the allotted space on the spread. (It's multiply width * height * characters per pica.) Never again do we have to hunt for that faculty photo that was just here a second ago. Nor do we have to spend endless hours twiddling our thumbs waiting for club presidents to identify their group photos. The last of the pages has been handed in and we can now begin the process all over again for the 1993 edition.

Cheri, after being roped in the way you were, it amazes me that you didn't strangle me. You accomplished with minimal training what it by rights should have taken three experienced people to do.

MaryAnn, what can I say except another fine job completed. How you handle everything remains a mystery to me.

Eric, the care you put into your section far surpasses the ordinary. The finesse you demonstrated in getting all the necessary artwork from the Greek presidents in the time allotted is a credit to you and the overall look of this edition.

John, your tireless efforts cannot be overlooked. Covering our unknown teams and trying to capture a partially completed season was not a coveted job. I am proud to say "You've done good!"

Seann, the late nights of typing certainly paid off. We have completed the 1992 edition and know that your nimble and limber fingers are eagerly awaiting the 1993 edition.

Nick, just remember to check your camera bag in the future. It always helps for the photographer to have both camera and film. Expect the unexpected, and shoot it for the EXPLORER.

Leah, another fine job. Managing our finances fell to your capable shoulders. Thank you.

The support of our writers cannot go unrecognized. Without your help, the yearbook would be quite silent.

Best of luck to all who follow —

Paigeann L. Pugaro
